I work as the Crisis Navigator at United Against Poverty, in my role, I help people who are homeless or struggling to pay their rent. My job is to support individuals and families during housing emergencies and help them find stable, long-term housing. I regularly work with people facing eviction, living in shelters, staying in motels, or sleeping outside. This experience has helped me understand the real challenges people face when trying to find and keep affordable housing. I help clients complete housing assessments, apply for rental assistance programs, and connect with landlords and property managers. I also work with community agencies, mental health providers, workforce programs, and legal services to help people build a plan to stay housed. Through this work, I see how rising rent costs, limited housing availability, income instability, and strict rental requirements affect people every day. I bring strong problem-solving skills and experience working with different community partners. I understand both the urgency of housing crises and the need for long-term solutions. I can share firsthand knowledge about barriers such as credit issues, background checks, transportation problems, and lack of access to support services. Most importantly, I bring the voices and experiences of the people directly impacted by the housing crisis. I want to help the committee create fair and practical solutions that truly meet the needs of our community.
