

We are happy to announce we have received funding for year 1 of an obesity prevention grant from the Centers for Disease Control. This is the first of the partnership between Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service and Texas A&M Health Science Center. This project will focus on access to healthy food and access to physical activity to impact obesity in this county. We are still in the early phases but this first year will begin with assessments and planning. We look forward to working together with you and will need your input as we move forward in the project.

Educational programs of the Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service are open to all people without regard to race, color, religion, sex, national origin, age, disability, genetic information or veteran status. The Texas A&M University System, U.S. Department of Agriculture, and the County Commissioners Courts of Texas Cooperating.