Subject: Mile 2 Time Charges - Credit for Utility Delays

In reviewing L&G project diaries and tracking of time credited for Utility Delays, the 3 days mentioned by Ms. Garza were discovered. In our daily logs, we miscounted July 31, 2015, August 20, 2015 and Sept 7, 2015 (labor day). I used the days in our diary logs to determine when the 120 days expired. These days do go over the 120 days by 3 days. However, the Contractor was directed by the letters sent to them on what days to stop and start. These 3 days were our oversight and not theirs. I truly believed that based on this information the 3 days being considered as Liquidated Damages is not the Contractor's fault. If you should have any questions, feel free to contact me.

Thanks,

Ricardo Gallaga, P.E.Project Engineer/Manager
