Title:

Review Proposed Amendment to The COR Design Framework

Background:

As the Planning Commission is aware, the City recently approved an amendment to the Development Plan for The COR (originally Ramsey Town Center). The next step is to amend the City's Zoning Ordinance to implement the City's vision for land use for this development. As part of the Zoning Code for The COR, a separate document was created, originally known as the Ramsey Town Center Design Guidelines, that contained design standards and guidelines to achieve the vision for the area. The document is incorporated by reference into City Code, and thus has the effect of being part of the Zoning Code. The document contains guidance on architectural, design, streets, parks, and other requirements.

The intent is to include bulk standards for the development within the Design Framework. The Zoning Code itself shall serve as direction for permitted uses and review procedures. Bulk Standards have been designed based on a street hierarchy to define 'build-to lines', pedestrian circulation (sidewalks), streetscape (landscape), and street design in a consolidated location. The Design Framework will better illustrate the interaction of the building with the street. Finally, the revised Design Framework also gives consideration to incorporating certain standards from private covenants that had previously been reviewed by an architectural review committee of the private association, which appears is no longer active in terms of architectural review.

Additional language has been developed regarding the streetscape/landscape element of the Design Framework. The intent was to emphasize both function and form. While landscaping can enhance any development, for it to be successful and attractive, the biological needs must be incorporated into the design at the outset to provide a habitable growing environ for the landscaping, which is what this language attempts to accomplish.

This case was prepared for discussion and review purposes. No formal action is being requested at this time. The revised Design Framework will also be presented to the HRA on December 6th. The intent of this discussion is to ensure that Staff and Development Manager have prepared the appropriate framework in place for the document before preparing final detail. Once approval is given on the general framework, the Development Team will complete final details within the document for final consideration.

Notification:

No notification required at this time. A Public Hearing will be scheduled for consideration on the final version of the document at a later date.

Design Framework – The COR

Purpose

The primary purpose of Design Framework is to set basic parameters, describe preferences and illustrate design intent. These framework standards serve as a framework within which creative design can and should occur – there is no one solution, but many options that meet the basic requirements of this document.

Application

The format and content of this framework are specifically tailored for use as a supplement to the Zoning Ordinance. This document is organized into two sections. The first section outlines issues and recommendations that apply to the entire COR. The second section highlights specific framework that apply to each sub-district within The COR.

Implied Responsibility

All participants in the development of The COR recognize the local and regional impacts of this project and the various systems that play an important role. Each parcel and each building must fit within the context of the entire plan. Individual projects must complement, not compete with, adjacent development in terms of public green space, walk and trail connections, stormwater management solutions, street layout, parking strategies, land use mix and building design.

Part One: Overall Framework

There are a number of framework that apply to the entire COR including recommendations for stormwater management, parks, streets, land use, parking, transit and other development components. Many of these overall COR framework overlap, or are integrated with one another. For ease of discussion they are categorized according to the same list of 'layers' that formed the basic structure for the Master Framework:

- Context – local, city, regional
- Street Hierarchy--access, circulation, arrangement
- Streetscape—preferred design, location
- Parking -- quantity, location, type
- Building Design-- preferred uses, horizontal/vertical mixed use, built form, character of development
- Signage—design, location, quantity, type
- Stormwater Management-- surface water features, stormwater management
- Parks/Public Spaces – parks, trails and open space

It is essential that proposed design solutions for development projects and other improvements within The COR demonstrate an understanding of the interplay between these layers.

Overall Framework - Context

Overview

The COR is a unique area within the City; but it is a part of, and connected with, a variety of local, city-wide and regional systems (See Figure 1). Each development project, whether a single building, one lot, or a series of blocks, must provide reasonable links to these systems as a primary design objective.

Guideline Recommendations

To ensure that The COR takes full advantage of local and regional systems, development should:

- Provide safe, easily recognized connections to city, county and state trail corridors
- Make provisions for city and regional transit service and amenities (including the Northstar Line) and encourage their use
- Tie into, and improve, the Ramsey utility network
- Integrate with and complement the existing (and future) street framework
- Become an integral part of the city and county drainage/stormwater management plan

Objectives

- Overall COR design (and all new private development within The COR) will accommodate stormwater from new projects and from off-site, and highlight stormwater features as an amenity
- Bikeways and pedestrian routes into The COR from adjacent neighborhoods must be designed for safety and ease of access, suggesting that a child on a bicycle has an equally accessible route to downtown.
- Parks and open space will be easily accessible to all COR residents, visitors, people who work here and also for the citizens of Ramsey and the surrounding area. This connected green system is reminiscent of the world renowned 'Grand Rounds' of Minneapolis.

Overall Framework – Street Hierarchy

Overview

The Development Master Plan defines a specific strategy for the layout of streets and blocks within, and around The COR. The size, type and configuration of this street hierarchy (See Figure 2) is based on a combination of projected traffic volume, level of service at intersections, proposed adjacent land use (destination commercial, residential, civic, recreation, etc.) and desired aesthetic character.

Great streets are essential components of an attractive and inviting public realm. These guidelines promote a street system that balances pedestrian and vehicular use. Providing streets that support traffic flow is important, but also creating ample space for street-side activities, strolling promenades, pockets of green and other amenities is critical to the success of The COR. Streets will promote convenient access by car – to storefronts, to parking lots and ramps, to entertainment attractions – but will also encourage foot traffic as a primary way to move about and conduct business in the core area.

Guideline Recommendations

The proposed street and block pattern reflects a compact urban character, not allowing dead end streets or cul-de-sacs, in favor of a traditional grid pattern and connected streets including the following:

- Provide a street network that distributes pedestrian and vehicular traffic throughout the various districts in The COR and encourages a more dispersed and less congested traffic flow (many choices or travel paths).
- Provide a clear hierarchy of streets resulting in a simple and understandable system for movement – easy access and convenient circulation throughout The COR.
- Convert primary perimeter streets (arterials such as Ramsey, Armstrong and Bunker Lake Boulevards) to urban street sections, providing sidewalks and street trees to replace roadside ditches.
- Promote improvements that invite pedestrian and bicycle use including wide sidewalks, streetscape amenities and designated bicycle trails (both on and off-street).

Objectives

Creative design solutions for public realm improvements should reflect these basic street classifications (street hierarchy) including:

- Arterial street – these streets provide the boundary of The COR and all access into The COR will be from one of these three streets:
 - Bunker Lake Boulevard
 - Armstrong Boulevard
 - Ramsey Boulevard
- Destination street – signature addresses for shopping, entertainment, services, work place and other primary amenities

- Sunwood Drive is the Destination street in The COR
- Parkway – premier ‘green streets’ adjacent to primary public park / green space
 - E. Ramsey Parkway
 - West Ramsey Parkway (east of the Sunwood roundabout)
 - Town Center Drive (north of the roundabout)
- Connector street – primary routes that link various districts within The COR, usually providing the most direct means of getting from point A to point B
 - Rhinestone Street
 - Zeolite Street
 - Civic Center Drive
- Downtown street – the most urban of street sections where high pedestrian traffic is intended and traffic calming measures such as on street parking, bump outs and other methods will be employed
 - Town Center Drive (south of the roundabout)
 - Sapphire Street
 - Other streets as shown on the Street Hierarchy Map
- Local street – neither destination nor primary connector routes, these streets provide much of the rest of the street grid throughout The COR.

Transit Overview

The COR is designed to be 'transit ready' in a variety of ways that go beyond providing a walkable public realm and connected street grid. The Master Plan also includes a multimodal transit station, with dedicated commuter parking, integrated with other uses at the heart of the retail, restaurant and entertainment district. This station functions as a hub where local circulator transit comes together with regional transit service and the Northstar Corridor. This station is designed to meet the short term needs of the Ramsey Star Express service, and also the long term objectives for proposed commuter rail service in the future. The COR is the Twin Cities' first and only transit-oriented development along the new Northstar Commuter Rail Line. With final approval from the Metropolitan Council as an in-fill station, the City of Ramsey has lined up financing and prepared plans for Ramsey Station at The COR. Construction is expected to commence in the fall of 2011 with riders boarding the train in the fall of 2012. As Northstar's most visible station, The COR will immediately bolster the ridership on the line, and continue to build recognition for this regional service.

Transit components include the following:

- Ramsey Star Express service provides peak period, peak direction bus service between downtown Minneapolis and Ramsey
- North Star Commuter Rail provides train service between Big Lake and downtown Minneapolis
- 350 park and ride parking spaces are provided for commuters adjacent to the transit station
- Pedestrian and bicycle connections are emphasized in the Master Plan as major links between the transit station, various districts within The COR and into the surrounding neighborhoods
- The COR can accommodate Metro Mobility, citywide circulator bus or town trolley connections as part of local and regional service to the transit station

The COR also encourages developers to participate in a Travel Demand Management (TDM) program to both assist and encourage residents and visitors to take advantage of the various modes available for their commuting and travel needs. The TDM program draws from incentives and services available through Anoka County and Metro Commuter Services that match riders with carpools and vanpools, provide discounted transit passes and manage work hours among other functions. Developers should submit a TDM plan with their site plan application for development and work with the City to implement their plans.

Transit Guideline Recommendations

Transit is an important component of the overall plan, with expectations for more ridership, using a greater range of transit options as they become available. More people, together with the mix of activities and amenities in The COR, encourages better designed, better connected transit service. It is a shared responsibility between city, county and developer to promote transit use, with both policy and bricks-and-mortar attention to the following framework:

- Understand and take advantage of opportunities to use existing and proposed transit components
- Provide transit related facilities specifically linked to uses and character within each COR district, including signage and lighting for way-finding and bicycle amenities
- Building future Northstar Commuter Rail riders through the Ramsey Star Express bus service

Transit Objectives

The primary objective is to provide a balance of transit service, bicycle and pedestrian connections and lanes to move traffic. The framework for The COR promotes public transportation as part of the solution and suggests a variety of street improvements and other amenities to invite increased use. Photographs throughout the framework suggest some of the many possibilities.

Overall Framework - Streetscape

Overview

The Master Plan defines a specific strategy for the layout of streets and blocks within, and around The COR. The amenities within the public right-of-way -and immediately adjacent -play an important role in the aesthetics of The COR. Great streets are essential components of an attractive and inviting public realm. Developing a streetscape that is comfortable and inviting to pedestrians is important to realizing the vision for The COR. The framework will encourage interesting and inviting places for the public.

The Streetscape framework defines the visual character and physical improvements for all public spaces within The COR. The document also provides the general framework and examples for design of proposed quasi-public and private space located within each development parcel.

Public realm/streetscape framework focus on the following elements:

- Parks, plazas and other public gathering spaces
- Street/sidewalk character and streetscape elements
- Bicycle/pedestrian connections (on-street and off-street)
- Residential courts, pocket parks and other private green space

The goal is to foster a safe and interesting public realm that will invite pedestrian activity, promote traffic calming, increase transit use and encourage community gathering. Street trees, lighting and decorative fencing provide the backbone for streetscape improvements. Added detail, such as special pavements, street furniture, public art and layered plantings will highlight specific nodes or uses.

Destination and Connector streets must balance a high level of service for the automobile with attractive and inviting amenities for the pedestrian (see Figure 2) including:

- Provide gracious sidewalk width to support intensity of pedestrian traffic in the core
- Install street trees to frame the street and provide shade
- Provide street lighting that meets all safety standards and design criteria, while creating a signature character for this district
- Explore a range of options for streetscape improvements including special pavements, interesting concrete tinting or scoring patterns, additional plantings, ornamental fencing and other features (note, however, that simpler is better and too much clutter is a negative)

The COR includes a network of bicycle/pedestrian trails and walkways (both on and off-street) that connect adjacent sub-districts to the Mixed Use Core. As you approach the core, these connections tend to become part of the shared right of way along the major streets, or become part of the urban park spaces. Bicycle riders may choose to share the street with vehicular traffic, or dismount and walk their bicycles along with the other pedestrians using the sidewalks. Providing and maintaining these bicycle and pedestrian connections should be a key component for all development projects in the core.

Guideline Recommendations

The proposed street and block pattern reflects a compact urban character, including the following:

- Bike racks interspersed throughout The COR to encourage cycling as an alternative mode of transportation.
- Benches on the public sidewalks to encourage people to linger in The COR
- Trees and planters along the streets to create an inviting space
- Wide sidewalks and both on- and off-street bicycle trails
- Kiosks and other way finding tools for visitors and residents in The COR
- Outdoor dining is encouraged on the street side of buildings within all districts
- Public plaza space is strongly encouraged to be located adjacent to the streets

Objectives

Creative design solutions for streetscape improvements should include:

- Streetscape improvements that provide traffic calming, particularly along Destination and Downtown streets
- Inviting streets that draw you into and through The COR
- A marriage of building design and streetscape design that encourages active spaces near the streets

Street Lights

Street lights are owned and installed by Connexus Energy. The streetlight design was developed in conjunction with the City of Ramsey and Connexus.

The standard street lights are designed to accommodate banner arms should banner signage be desired. The banner arms should be the manufacturer's standard break-away banner arms to ensure safety and minimize maintenance costs. Connexus provides street light maintenance for the City. Connexus bills the City of Ramsey for the cost of installation and maintenance.

The choice of street light was intended to emphasize the pedestrian scale of The COR. Light poles within the public right-of-way should be planned to accommodate banners, flowers, hanging artwork and electrical outlets.

There are three different streetlight types within The COR:

- 24-foot high poles at intersections
- 14-foot high poles at mid-block
- 12-foot high poles at The Draw

The City will ensure that the appropriate streetlights are installed on all public streets as described by the Design Framework. Private developers shall provide parking lot or other project lighting that retains these design objectives. All lighting shall comply with City Code performance standards for lighting. All lighting shall be reviewed by City staff to ensure compliance with the Design Framework and City Code standards described above.

Overall Framework - Parking

Overview

Balancing the realities of car-related necessities (streets, parking and so on) with future transit service and the desired character of The COR is a significant challenge. The goal is to provide adequate parking; both quantity and location, while promoting new strategies that support the overall needs of The COR. Parking will be provided through a combination of on street spaces, off-street surface lots, underground lots and structured ramps to support the mix of uses at the core.

Parking structures should contribute to the overall character and image of The COR. Ramp design should include elements, colors and materials that reflect, or complement surrounding buildings. Liner stores or other street level uses should be integrated into ramp design along important street frontages.

Guideline Recommendations

Parking guidelines encourage the following:

- Locate off-street surface parking lots away from the major streets, either behind or to the side of primary buildings
- Provide a combination of fencing, landscaping and landform to screen parking areas from major streets and important views
- Create strategies for shared parking between adjacent uses, taking advantage of peak and off-peak cycles, business hours, nighttime activities, special events and other needs
- Provide alternative surfaces for secondary (less frequently used) parking areas including porous pavements, green pavements and so on
- Provide facilities or services that respond to and connect with future transit to reduce required parking, including shuttle/circulator bus, bicycle lockers
- Provide flexibility including hours for on-street parking, security and enforcement practices, permit or metering
- Provide parallel parking on both public and private streets throughout The COR, to add parking and create a traffic calming, pedestrian buffer
- Explore options to integrate stormwater management requirements into parking area design
- Explore various landscape approaches to soften parking area edges, provide shade, integrate native plantings, offset islands and other ideas to reduce to 'sea of parking' image

Objectives

The primary objective is to provide a balance of surface lots, on-street and structured parking, with ample quantities and close proximity to serve the mix of uses in The COR. In addition to providing adequate space, excellent design is a major factor as well. The framework for The COR encourages creativity, innovation, quality and attention to detail in every aspect of project development, including parking solutions. Photographs throughout the Design Framework suggest some of the many possibilities.

Parking Districts
VERSION 5.03
9/27/11

Minimum Standards

Parking in The COR is intended to be shared to the greatest extent practicable in all mixed-use areas. The parking standards are intended to provide a practical basis for providing adequate parking within the COR District through a careful analysis of uses, shared parking arrangements, use of public street parking and reduction allowances for the proximity to the transit station. A parking plan has been prepared to identify the planned number, location, sharing arrangements and public use (see Figure 3). The parking plan provides information that can be used to help address longer term parking arrangements where the possibility of use conversion or building expansion exists. Parking shall be provided under any of the following arrangements:

- A. No parking shall be located between the front of the principal structure and the front lot line on parcels abutting Destination and Downtown streets.
- B. Not more than 50 percent of the parking shall be located in front of the principal structure and the front lot line on parcels abutting Arterial, Parkway, Connector and Local streets.
- C. Wherever a surface parking area faces a street frontage, such frontage shall be screened with a decorative wall, railing, hedge, or a combination of these elements, to a minimum height of three feet (3') and a maximum height of four and one-half feet ($4\frac{1}{2}'$) above the level of the parking lot, at the build-to line required for the property. The amount of required screening may vary by sub-district and street frontage.

- D. No parking spaces shall be located on corner lots at the point of street intersections.

- E. Shared parking in COR1 will be accomplished through a Parking Use and Maintenance Agreement (PUMA).
- F. Off-street parking in the COR2 and COR3 sub-districts shall be secured for public use through parking easements and other appropriate conveyances. Shared parking arrangements between nearby uses are encouraged in both sub-districts.
- G. On-street parking adjacent to buildings may be used for the purposes of calculating parking requirements for street level, non-residential uses in all districts. A reduction of one parking space may be deducted from the minimum required off-street spaces for each on street parking space provided at the lot frontage on a public street.
- H. Within the COR-4 sub-district, parking on individual parcels serving individual uses may be provided if designated and approved as part of the master plan.
- I. Within all sub-districts, a minimum driveway length of 25 feet is required to limit conflicts between vehicles parked in the driveway and street or sidewalk users.
- J. In order to ensure the pedestrian orientation of the COR Districts, minimum/maximum on-site parking standards are set based on the following:

Use		Minimum number of parking stalls	Maximum number of parking stalls*
Retail		2 per 1,000 sq. ft.	4 per 1,000 sq. ft.
Restaurants		3 per 1,000 sq. ft.	5 per 1,000 sq. ft.
Offices		2 per 1,000 sq. ft.	3 per 1,000 sq. ft.
Medical offices, clinics		2 per 1,000 sq. ft.	4 per 1,000 sq. ft.
Health clubs		3 per 1,000 sq. ft.	5 per 1,000 sq. ft.
Theaters, places of assembly		1 per 5 seats	1 per 3 seats
Residential
	Attached or detached	1 per unit	2 per unit
	Multifamily units	1 per unit	2 per unit

*If a parking structure is provided on site, maximum parking stalls do not apply.

- K. Use of required parking spaces. Required parking spaces must be available for the use of residents, customers or employees of the use. Fees may be charged for the use of required parking spaces. Required parking spaces may not be assigned in any way to a use on another site, except for joint parking situations. Also, required parking spaces may not be used for the parking of equipment or storage of goods or inoperable vehicles.
- L. Transit Service. The minimum number of parking stalls required on site may be reduced by 10% for any parcel located within ¼ mile of a transit stop. To qualify for this reduction, the transit stop must provide regular service on all days of the week and direct pedestrian access must be provided between the building and the transit stop.

- M. Increase to Maximum Required Parking. If additional parking is sought to exceed these maximum requirements, a conditional use permit can be sought to increase maximums up to 25 percent. In the COR-2 sub-district, an increase of 25% in the maximum number of parking stalls is permitted without the issuance of a conditional use permit if approved as part of the site plan.
- N. In the COR1 sub-district, a PUMA (Parking Use and Maintenance Agreement) shall be applied to all development as follows:
1. It is the City's intent to maximize development on individual lots. In order to help landowners accomplish this goal, the City will develop public parking ramps, which will be available for public parking within The COR. In order to minimize the amount of the site required for parking, the landowner may choose to enter into the PUMA for utilization of the public parking ramps to meet all or a portion of their minimum parking requirements.
 2. In order to ensure that the shared parking within The COR is adequately financed and maintained, the City may require payment of an amount equal to the value of the required parking on a per-stall price basis for ramp parking through the PUMA. Funds collected by the City shall be deposited in a special fund used only to acquire and/or develop off-street parking facilities for the COR. The City will determine the appropriate contribution.
 3. Each development shall be subject to a PUMA that specifies that each property in the COR shall be financially responsible for its proportionate share of a shared parking facility. The proportionate share shall be determined on the basis of the property's off-street parking needs, as determined by the parking requirements of Item J above. Financial responsibility shall cover the construction and continuing maintenance of the parking facility. The parking facility may be constructed and maintained by the City or by a private management entity acceptable to the City.

Private Streets

Private streets may be allowed within residential subdivisions, subject to the standards in Section 117-112 (e)3.b. of the Zoning Ordinance.

Loading Areas

- A. Loading areas and docks shall be limited to the rear of the building.
- B. Loading areas shall be fully screened from public streets, public parks and residential areas through landscaping and building design measures.

Overall Framework – Building Design

Overview

The COR Master Plan identifies the preferred mix and approximate location of a variety of land use types. Together with the Zoning Code, this Design Framework focuses on the following overall objectives:

- Promote vertical and horizontal mixed use (within a building, within a block, within a district)
- Provide a variety of housing types, styles, pricing
- Encourage increased density in and around the central core area
- Promote an interesting mix of building styles, scales and massing for each sub-district
- Support creative, innovative, high quality design solutions as the benchmark for success
- Integrate mix of uses with public green space within each district
- Provide a variety of commercial types
- Mix residential and commercial uses to promote street-level activity throughout the day

Guideline Recommendations

The mix of land uses in The COR will encourage activity during the day and into the evening and nighttime hours. As a focus of commerce, employment, recreation and housing, The COR resembles a small to medium size Midwestern downtown in scale and character. Land uses are intentionally mixed, to bring shoppers and workers into the area during the day and attract new residents and visitors to entertainment venues in the evening.

The civic component of The COR, anchored by City Hall, Police Station and variety of public spaces and squares, adds an important element to the land use mix and brings a level of authenticity to the district.

Objectives

- Encourage vertical mixed-use in the core with housing and office space over retail uses along the street, particularly in the center of the district.
- In residential districts, particularly closer to the core, a limited amount of retail uses will be encouraged to service residents and provide nearby places to gather.
- Promote innovative models for housing that include a mix of townhomes, flats and lofts within single buildings or on the same block.
- Accommodate larger, 'big box' retailing within the COR2 sub-district and only if innovative design approaches are used including two story buildings, use of liner stores facing the street, minimal blank walls, creative parking strategies, etc.
- Where similar uses create a 'family' or campus of buildings (e.g. medical campus), buildings should reinforce the street edge and parking should be set within the core of the block.
- Uses shall promote pedestrian friendly streets, contributing to street level activities and overall visual character of each district.
- All uses should reinforce the street edge.

Architectural Overview

High quality architecture is an essential component in fulfilling the objectives of the Master Plan. Rather than prescribing a particular style, these architectural guidelines are intended to encourage an integration of both traditional and contemporary design. Architectural designs should provide a consistent quality, measured, to a great degree, by the pedestrian experience along the street and by an architectural expression that provides character without being thematic, obtrusive, or artificial. Architectural character should strive to be authentic and varied, but not 'thematic'.

Architecture Recommendations

Of all the layers that combine to form The COR Master Plan, architecture will typically be the most prominent development component. Both visually and physically, architecture will play a major role in defining the overall design character and mix of uses for The COR. It is crucial that the design and location of buildings address these architectural guidelines, with specific emphasis on the following:

- Promote an animated street presence with a mix of street-level uses, interesting building façades, many doors and windows on the street, careful design of lighting, awnings, signage and other elements that animate the pedestrian experience

- Promote variety in building design, character and expression; not one theme or building style, but a thoughtful integration of many design solutions
- Promote a variety of building types including a range of height, scale and proportion, that support an integrated mix of housing options, shopping destinations, entertainment venues, civic structures and other COR uses
- Encourage the use of high quality materials, suggesting a preference toward native materials and masonry elements, with respect for local building techniques
- Building location is as important as building style; special architectural elements, character, transparency and a higher level of materials and detailing should be used to highlight key streets and important crossroads throughout The COR
- Buildings should always be located at all four corners of intersections. In the COR2 sub-district, if the City finds that there are unique circumstances where buildings cannot be located on the corner, the City may approve the use of fences, walls or other design elements to create that "street edge"

- Encourage both vertical mixed use (within each building) and horizontal mixed use (within each block) throughout this district
- Include a mix of housing, civic, retail, restaurant, entertainment, performance and other uses that encourage a variety of activities throughout the day.
- Generally, buildings should be located at the street right-of-way line (zero setback), but also allow recessed space for outdoor dining and other street level activities providing some minor deviation for variety
- Greater emphasis should be given to architectural elements, materials and other design features for buildings located at primary intersections, or where streets intersect with parks, such as the streets that front on or end near the Municipal Plaza. These locations can often be seen from several directions, perhaps terminate a view from a distance down the street or sit at a prominent node; They will likely become future landmarks or helpful orientation/wayfinding icons as The COR develops
- Minimize openings between buildings, although limited driveway access and some provision for pedestrian connections through blocks are encouraged – gaps between buildings to accommodate surface parking lots, greater building setbacks or other purposes are discouraged
- Encourage recessed entries and windows to create street-level interest, variety and enhance pedestrian scale along street frontage

- Equipment, mechanical systems, transformers, etc. must be screened from view in a way that is integral to the architecture of the building. Screening should be accomplished with materials similar to or compatible with materials used on the main structure; metal fencing or mechanical vent screens alone are not sufficient.
- Roof lines and cornice details shall be completed in a 3-dimensional manner so that the back of roof features or similar unfinished areas are not visible.

- Provide parking spaces for typical daily use, satisfying both quantity and location needs through a mix of on street, small surface lot, underground and ramped parking solutions
- Provide options for additional/overflow parking to support holiday traffic and special events including porous pavements, turf parking areas (Netlon and other soil amendments) or shuttle service from nearby parking areas
- Encourage shared parking solutions that target around the clock shifts in destination, audience or take advantage of peak/off-peak hours of operation for various uses within the core area
- Promote municipal parking ramps as the primary facility to meet public parking needs within the core area
- Minimize surface parking lots in favor of other solutions including underground parking to serve residential buildings, on-street parking to serve retail shops and parking ramps

- Locate surface parking lots away from the major streets, either behind or to the side of primary buildings; surface parking lots along major street frontage are not allowed in the core area
- Discourage driveway access to parking facilities along Arterial, Destination and Parkway streets, in favor of side streets.

DRAFT

Overall Framework - Signage

Overview

Signage within The COR should provide a system for clear wayfinding for all modes of transportation and should ensure successful business operation while maintaining the design aesthetic of this unique project. These sign standards are intended to allow flexibility and creativity while maintaining the design concepts of The COR. Due to the distinctive nature of The COR, the sign standards from the City Code are not applicable and signage shall be allowed as prescribed by the Design Framework. A Master Sign Plan identifies the location of key sign locations (see Figure 4).

Guideline Recommendations

The COR development manager shall prepare a Master Sign Plan for the public elements of the project, which are in compliance with the design framework and will be adopted by reference. The Master Sign Plan will specifically address public signs including:

- The three off-site community signs
- Banner signs on light poles
- Signage for public parks
- Signage for public parking ramps
- Signage for public buildings
- Community kiosks

Objectives

Signage should be used as a tool to help identify businesses and neighborhoods with The COR and should have elements that are focused on the pedestrian nature of The COR as well as the signage needs for businesses.

- Signage and lighting which is integrated into the design of the building is encouraged.

Definitions

All signage definitions shall have the meaning in Section 117-1 (Definitions) of the Zoning Ordinance except for those specific definitions provided below:

Awning Sign means a sign incorporated into or attached to an awning.

Community sign means an off-site sign identifying the development name and key tenants. Community signs may also include public information. Reader boards are allowed to be incorporated into community signs within The COR.

Project sign means a freestanding area identification sign which identifies a single-family or multifamily residential subdivision, a commercial development or an industrial park or office park and which is located on the same parcel as the development it identifies.

Public Realm/Streetscape sign means any sign erected and maintained by public officials or public agencies, or approved and authorized for use by state or local governmental authorities.

Standards

Public Realm/Streetscape Signs

The pedestrian oriented nature of The COR requires unique signage that will build on the design concepts for The COR. These types of signs include banner signs on the streetlights, kiosks, street signs, wayfinding signs, signage for public parking ramps, etc. As the design concept for The COR has been refined, so has the signage plan. The COR development manager shall develop standards for these public realm signs as part of the Master Sign Plan. The Master Sign Plan shall be incorporated by reference and may be updated from time to time. Such signage shall be allowed on public spaces as needed to provide information and wayfinding. No advertising shall be allowed on Public Realm/Streetscape Signs except for community events.

Community signs

Community signs include are planned to include three signs on Highway 10, as shown on the Signage Plan (see Figure 4). The signs include the existing Community Sign near the future transit plaza, the sign at the northwest corner of Highway 10 and Ramsey Boulevard and the planned sign at the northwest corner of Highway 10 and Armstrong Boulevard.

These off-site signs are allowed as shown on the signage plan and shall have consistent materials and colors. The Master Sign Plan shall detail the materials, colors and standards for these three community signs. The Master Sign Plan shall include standards for which tenants shall be allowed on the community signs.

Desirable signs are designed to be architecturally compatible with buildings within the development and other signage within the development

Project Signs

One freestanding sign is allowed per building, provided that the following standards are met:

- A. The building in which the advertising business is located, shall be set back a minimum of six feet from a public street right-of-way.
- B. The area of each face of the signboard shall not exceed six square feet and the signboard shall not have more than two readable faces. In the COR2 district, project signs shall not exceed 100 square feet.
- C. The height of the top of the signboard, or of any posts, brackets, or other supporting elements shall not exceed six feet from the ground.

- D. The signboard shall be constructed of wood, acrylic, aluminum or metal and shall be architecturally compatible with the style, composition, materials, colors and details of the building.
- E. No part of the sign shall encroach on the right-of-way and its location shall not interfere with pedestrian or vehicular circulation.
- F. Limited to one sign per building and shall not be in addition to wall-mounted, applied letter or projecting signs.
- G. The readable faces of the sign shall be perpendicular to the adjacent street.

In the COR2 District, the following signage shall be allowed:

- A. Ground sign. There shall not be more than one ground sign for each parcel. The gross surface area of a ground sign shall not exceed 100 square feet for each exposed face nor exceed an aggregate gross surface area of 200 square feet.
- B. Menu board. One on-site menu board per drive-up or walk-up lane of a drive-in restaurant up to a maximum of 32 square feet each. Menu boards are allowed a message on one side only and cannot contain an advertising message.
- C. Directional signs.
 - 1. Directional or instructional signs are permitted in accordance with section 117-463(I).
 - 2. Parking lot directional signs designating parking area entrances and exits are limited to one sign for each entrance and/or exit and shall not exceed four square feet for each exposed face. Parking lot directional signs shall not project higher than five feet in height, as measured from the established grade of the parking area to which such signs are accessory.
 - 3. Parking lot instructional signs designating the conditions of use or identification parking areas shall not exceed eight square feet and shall not project higher than ten feet in height for wall signs and seven feet in height for ground signs, as measured from the established grade of the parking area to which such signs are accessory.
- D. Window signs are restricted to 30 percent of the area of the window in which the sign is to be displayed.

Wall Signs

Wall signs are permitted within all COR sub-districts.

Wall signs shall be permitted on one wall, except that lots with frontage on more than one street may have signage on one wall per street frontage.

Within the COR1, COR3, COR4 and COR5 districts, the following standards apply:

- A. Wall-mounted or painted signs, provided the following standards are met:
 1. The sign shall be affixed to the front facade of the building, and shall project outward from the wall to which it is attached no more than six inches.
 2. Single Tenant Buildings. Each building shall be allowed one wall sign per street frontage. Signage must be located on the street elevation. The area of the sign shall not exceed five percent of the ground floor building facade area or 50 square feet, whichever is less.
 3. Multi-Tenant Buildings.
 - a. Each building shall be allowed wall signage on the street frontage elevation. For buildings with multiple street frontages, the allowable signage is per street frontage. Signage must be located on the street elevation.
 - b. Each building is allowed wall signage that shall not exceed 5% of the wall area of the building façade adjacent to the street or 50 square feet, whichever is less.
 - c. Tenant signage must be located on the tenant lease space.
 - d. At least 50% of the allowed signage must be allocated to ground floor tenants and located on the ground floor.
 - e. Signage is limited to a maximum of one sign per business/tenant, except that tenants with frontage on multiple streets may be permitted to have signage on each street frontage.
 - f. Multi-tenant buildings must have wall signs of similar design. Sign permits for tenants in multi-tenant buildings shall only be permitted by the City after the building owner has submitted a comprehensive sign plan approved by the Zoning Administrator. The comprehensive sign plan for the building shall include similar design standards including sign material, color, style, spacing and size.

4. Signs for buildings facing Highway 10. Single or multi-tenant buildings that have frontage on Highway 10 or are separated from Highway 10 only by other public right-of-way, shall be allowed to have signage on that street elevation that is up to 5% of the wall area of that building façade with no maximum square footage.
- B. Wall-mounted building directory signs identifying the occupants of a commercial building, including upper story business uses, provided the following standards are met:
1. The sign is located next to the entrance.
 2. The sign shall project outward from the wall to which it is attached no more than six inches.
 3. The sign shall not extend above the parapet, eave, or building facade.
 4. The area of the signboard shall not exceed three square feet, with each tenant limited to one square foot.
 5. The height of the lettering, numbers, or graphics shall not exceed four inches.
 6. One such sign is allowed per public building entrance and is allowed in addition to other permitted wall signage.
- C. Applied letters may substitute for wall-mounted signs, if constructed of painted wood, painted cast metal, bronze, brass, acrylic or black anodized aluminum. The height of applied letters shall not exceed 12 inches.
- D. Logos area considered signs and shall be included in the maximum allowable sign area.
- E. Window or door signs, provided that the following standards are met:
1. The sign shall not exceed ten percent of the window or door area or four square feet, whichever is less.
 2. The sign shall be silk screened, hand painted, applied letters/graphics, neon tubing or other sign technologies that meet these standards.
 3. Limited to one sign per business, applied on either the window or the door, but not on both.
 4. The sign shall not have an opaque backing of any type although smoked glass is allowed.
 5. Window signage (includes graphics) shall be permitted on the same building walls that have, or are allowed to have, wall signage pursuant to Item A above. Window signage shall be deducted from the allowable wall signage area.

Within the COR2 district, where more conventional suburban development is expected, rather than the neo-traditional development planned for the other COR sub-districts, the following standards apply:

- A. Wall, canopy or marquee sign. Total sign area may not exceed 15 percent of the front building facade. At least 50 percent of the signage area must be placed on the measured wall with remaining signage area, if desired, distributed on any other wall. Sign height shall not exceed the top of the parapet wall or, if no parapet wall, sign height shall not exceed the height of the eaves. The gross surface area of a wall, canopy or marquee sign may be increased by ten percent if such wall sign:
 1. Consists only of individual, outlined alphabetic, numeric and/or symbolic characters without background except that provided by the building surface to which the sign is to be affixed;
 2. Illumination, if any, is achieved through shielded illumination, shielded silhouette lighting, or shielded spot lighting but not any lighting where the light source is visible or exposed on the face or sides of the characters; and
 3. A wall, canopy or marquee sign may be located on the outermost wall of any principle building but shall not project more than 16 inches from the wall to which the sign is to be affixed. A wall sign shall not project higher than the parapet line of the wall to which the sign is to be affixed.

In all COR sub-districts, restaurants and cafes shall be permitted one wall-mounted display featuring the actual menu as used at the dining table, to be contained within a shallow wood or metal case and clearly visible through a glass front. The display case shall be attached to the building wall, next to the main entrance, at a height of approximately five feet, shall not exceed a total area of two square feet, and may be lighted. This signage is allowed in addition to other permitted wall signage.

Projecting Signs

Projecting signs, including graphics or icon signs, mounted perpendicular to the building wall, are encouraged in all sub-districts, provided the following standards are met:

- A. The sign area shall not exceed six square feet.
- B. The distance from the ground to the lower edge of the signboard shall be ten feet or greater.
- C. The height of the top edge of the signboard shall not exceed the height of the wall from which the sign projects, if attached to a single story building, or the height of the sill or bottom of any second story window, if attached to a multistory building.
- D. The distance from the building wall to the signboard shall not exceed six inches.

- E. The width of the signboard shall not exceed three feet.
- F. Limited to one sign per business. Projecting sign area shall be deducted from the allowable wall signage area.
- G. Granted to ground floor commercial uses only.

Awning Signs

Awning signs are allowed in all COR sub-districts. Awning signs are allowed for ground floor uses only, provided that the following standards are met:

- A. If acting as the main business sign, it shall not exceed 24 square feet in area, and the height of the lettering, numbers, or graphics shall not exceed 12 inches.
- B. If acting as an auxiliary business sign, it shall be located on the valance only, shall not exceed four square feet in area, and the height of the lettering, numbers, or graphics shall not exceed four inches.

*One sign is allowed per street frontage (either wall or project)

Restaurants and cafes in all districts are allowed one wall mounted menu board not to exceed 2 sq. ft. in addition to other permitted wall signage.

Off-Site Signs

Off-site signs are prohibited except for wayfinding and community signage specifically allowed by the Design Framework.

Additional standards

- A. Businesses with frontage on more than one public street are allowed the permitted signs for each street frontage.
- B. Businesses with service entrances may identify these with one wall-mounted or applied letter sign not exceeding two square feet.
- C. One directional sign, facing a rear parking lot. This sign may be any type of permitted sign other than a freestanding sign, but shall be limited to three square feet in area.

Creative Sign Standards

- A. Purpose. This section establishes standards and procedures for the design, review, and approval of creative signs. The purposes of this creative sign program are to:
 - 1. Encourage signs of unique design, and that exhibit a high degree of thoughtfulness, imagination, inventiveness, and spirit; and
 - 2. Provide a process for the application of sign regulations in ways that will allow creatively designed signs that make a positive visual contribution to the overall image of the city, while mitigating the impacts of large or unusually designed signs.
- B. Applicability. An applicant may request approval of a sign permit for a creative sign to authorize onsite signs that employ standards that differ from the other provisions of this chapter but comply with the provisions of this section.
- C. Application Requirements. A sign permit application for a creative sign shall include all information and materials required by the City.
- D. Procedure. A sign permit application for a creative sign shall be subject to review and approval by the City as part of the Site Plan review process. When the creative sign is proposed after site plan review is complete, a creative sign may be approved by the Zoning Administrator when the proposed sign is fifty square feet or less, and shall be approved by the City Council when the sign is larger than fifty square feet.
- E. Design Criteria. In approving an application for a creative sign, the review authority shall ensure that a proposed sign meets the following design criteria:
 - 1. Design Quality. The sign shall:
 - a. Constitute a substantial aesthetic improvement to the site and shall have a positive visual impact on the surrounding area;
 - b. Be of unique design, and exhibit a high degree of thoughtfulness, imagination, inventiveness, and spirit; and
 - c. Provide strong graphic character through the imaginative use of graphics, color, texture, quality materials, scale, and proportion.
 - 2. Contextual Criteria. The sign shall contain at least one of the following elements:

- a. Classic historic design style;
 - b. Creative image reflecting current or historic character of the City;
 - c. Inventive representation of the use, name, or logo of the structure or business.
3. Architectural Criteria. The sign shall:
 - a. Utilize or enhance the architectural elements of the building; and
 - b. Be placed in a logical location in relation to the overall composition of the building's façade and not cover any key architectural features and details of the façade.
4. Neighborhood Impacts. The sign shall be located and designed not to cause light and glare impacts on neighboring residential uses.

Prohibited signs

The following signs are prohibited:

- A. Box signs or cabinet signs, whether on a wall, projecting or on canopies are prohibited except for logo signs permitted as part of an overall sign plan.
- B. Signs employing mercury vapor, low pressure and high pressure sodium and metal halide lighting; plastic panel rear-lighted signs.
- C. Signs on roofs, dormers, and balconies.
- D. Billboards.
- E. Signs painted or mounted upon the exterior side or rear walls on any principle or accessory building or structure, except as otherwise permitted hereunder.
- F. Free standing pylon signs over six feet in height, except community signs.
- G. Back-lit awnings.
- H. Interchangeable letter boards or panels.
- I. Flashing signs.
- J. Off-premises signs, except community signs.

Real Estate Signs

Real estate signs advertising that a particular property is for sale, rent, or lease are limited to one sign per property.

Temporary Signs

Temporary signs are allowed per Section 117-465 (Temporary signs) of the Zoning Ordinance.

Overall Framework – Stormwater Management

Overview

Water features and drainage systems are essential components of The COR Master Plan. The mix of ponds, streams, fountains and other water elements will provide focal amenities and year round activities within the framework of an environmentally responsible, visually pleasing strategy to manage stormwater. Because the Mississippi River is a restricted discharge water of the state, and because we are creating a new discharge from this development, each sub-district and each site has a responsibility to utilize 'best management practices' (BMP) to pretreat run-off, reduce erosion and encourage infiltration. Water elements are not intended to be separate stand-alone features, but instead should be integrated with the variety of parks, trails and public open space proposed for The COR. Water and landscape should be designed and utilized within multipurpose areas that accommodate both active and passive recreational use.

Objectives

Integration of water and landscape, design creativity, use of high quality materials and safety concerns are the critical objectives to be met – the following examples illustrate only a few of many possibilities:

- Innovative new products, such as special soil systems (Netlon, structural soils), pervious pavements for parking areas, storm ceptors, underground storage and other creative techniques should be used to BMP standards
- 'Green architecture', expressed through green roofs, gray water recycling and other techniques should be included to reduce the impact of new development on stormwater systems
- Water feature design should include both formal elements (such as reflecting pools or fountains) and natural/informal forms (such as ponds, streams, waterfalls) and should explore creative ways to integrate wetland/rain garden landscapes with active, urban spaces.

Guideline Recommendations

Park/Public Space framework not only defines the overall role and character of public space, but also encourages each development parcel to address the following:

- Create signature water features (ponds, pools, fountains, waterfalls, etc.) as major visual amenities throughout The COR
- Promote high quality, creative and appealing aesthetics for all system elements
- Integrate stormwater management components (meeting both water quality and quantity requirements)

A great deal of time and effort has gone into the calculation and design of a 'watershed-based' stormwater management plan to support COR development. While this overall strategy addresses the water quantity issue for the entire COR by providing storage and conveyance facilities for storm events, individual development projects (block-by-block) have an equal responsibility to meet water quality standards as a primary goal. Each project should integrate a variety of techniques, materials and methods to promote multiple use, maximum flexibility, improved aesthetics for parking areas, park spaces, drainage swales and other site features.

DRAFT

Overall Framework – Parks/Public Spaces

Overview

The overall design framework of The COR is based on a system of linked parks, trails and open space. The City of Ramsey, Anoka County, and to some extent, the State of Minnesota all play a role in local and regional parks programming, design review, construction sequencing, implementation and ultimately maintenance and operation of key public spaces within this framework. The goal is to link existing and proposed parks and trails defined in regional park plans with proposed new parks and trails within The COR. Of equal importance is the contribution from each block and each development project to this network of green, adding a variety of private, semi-private, and perhaps some additional public space throughout The COR. Private development will share the responsibility to provide inviting, innovative and useable green space as integral parts of individual parcel site design.

Guideline Recommendations

The Design Framework encourages the following:

- Work with the City to create an integrated, comprehensive open space system that links with existing city and county trails and open space networks
- Encourage private development (block-by-block) to share in the responsibility to provide inviting, innovative and useable green space as integral parts of each development project
- Integrate stormwater management components (meeting water quality and quantity requirements) within both public / private park and open space improvements

Together, the system of public and semi-public green space will result in a welcoming public realm throughout the new community.

Objectives

Based on the Development Master Plan for The COR, a variety of public and private green space is proposed including:

- Each block and each project will provide intentional, creative, innovative, useable green areas as integral components of site development and building design.
- At the individual block scale, small squares and greens will provide places for gathering and relaxation, especially targeted to meet the demands of adjacent, or nearby buildings. Elements such as gardens, gazebos and fountains should characterize these more intimate public spaces.
- At the neighborhood scale, parks will provide space for more active recreation, and should be flexible enough to accommodate a variety of recreational activities.
- Playgrounds, game fields and park buildings are suggested park amenities and will target a wider user demand from the surrounding community.
- At The COR, the Municipal Plaza will connect with all other parks and open space elements, providing a focal point for activity and a sense of place. Gardens, public pavilions and shelters, play lots and open play fields are suggested amenities that will provide built-in flexibility to meet the demands of both the local population and regional visitors to The COR.

Part Two: Sub-district Framework

Overview

The Master Plan and Zoning Ordinance identify five distinct sub-districts within The COR. Each of these sub-districts (outlined on the plan below) is defined by a unique mix of uses, specific site development patterns and perhaps a distinctive character or image. The sub-districts complement one another as part of the overall plan. The sub-districts are shown the attached Sub-district Map (Figure 5). They include:

- COR1 Mixed Use Core – provides the broadest variety, highest density and greatest intensity of development, encouraging both vertical and horizontal mixed use
- COR2 Commercial – provides a location for larger scale retail and other auto-orientated commercial uses
- COR3 Workplace – provides a location for uses with high concentrations of employees, such as medical/technology related office, and other corporate or institutional uses
- COR4 Neighborhood – provides opportunities for a range of housing types from small lot single family to townhouse, to high density senior or rental apartment
- COR5 Park and Open Space – preserves environmental features and provides neighborhood/community amenities throughout The COR

Development plans must respond to the overall COR Design Framework described in Part One of this document, but also must address the following detailed framework for each sub-district. To further clarify and illustrate proposed features in the Master Plan, these sub-district guidelines are organized under the following categories:

- Public Realm / Streetscape Framework
- Site Design Framework
- Architectural Framework

In all cases, the sub-district framework must be applied in harmony with the overall COR framework and with other existing city, county, state codes, design criteria, plans and studies that support broader goals for regional growth and development. However, within each district, development standards shall be based, in part, on the street hierarchy established in The COR.

Public Realm/Streetscape

- A. The developer shall be responsible for construction of all streetscape improvements along adjacent streets. These improvements include all hardscape improvements, such as trails, sidewalks, street trees, benches, bike racks, etc.

Plazas

- A. All properties with principal buildings in excess shall be required to have a public plaza space.
- B. The public plaza space shall include benches, trash receptacles, lighting fixtures and other amenities to create a welcoming space for tenants of the building and members of the public.
- C. These plazas spaces should visible from the public street.

Architecture

These architectural framework standards suggest an important balance between design continuity, desirable variety and the notion that buildings should complement, and perhaps contrast, but not compete with one another. The lasting appeal of the final outcome must be grounded in the authenticity of the design and the acceptable level of ‘messiness’ that comes with creating a real downtown over time; ‘faux’ second floors, stage set or themed solutions, and large faceless buildings are not acceptable.

Auto Versus Human Design

Providing rear alleys enables the home to present itself to the street, which promotes sociability and walkability.

Minimum Standards

Definitions

Build to line: The line at which construction of a building facade is to occur on a lot. The build to line provides a maximum setback for all building facades from the right-of-way or inside edge of the sidewalk, whichever is greater. The build to line applies to all facades abutting a street right of way. Build to line standards are based on the sub-district the parcel is located and the street in which the building is located upon.

Setback: The minimum required distance between a parking lot or the vertical wall of a building and a lot line. Setbacks are typically more flexible than build to lines and allow a building to be set further back from the lot line and street right-of-way.

Requirements:

- A. Development standards shall be defined within each sub-district.
- B. Residential development should provide variety within the subdivision to avoid monotony. Developers are encouraged to include front porches and windows that face all streets. Corner units are encouraged to have more than one window per side of building to help create a sense of place in the community and promote safety on the street.
- C. Buildings should be articulated to break up the building façade on all elevations. Rooflines and building elevations should be articulated to break up the mass of buildings. Buildings must be broken at a minimum of every 50 feet. This variation can be accomplished through one or more of the following:

1. Wall face variations (minimum depth of 2 feet)
2. Pilasters or columns (minimum depth of 2 feet)
3. Upper wall break in color and/or materials (minimum of 2/3 up the height of the wall)
4. Wainscot (minimum of 4 feet high)
5. Canopies (minimum 4 foot width)
6. Corner and demising wall or building separations

- D. Each application must list building materials, roofing materials and building colors on the plans. Building articulation, mechanical screening by architectural elements and design elements on all building elevations must be identified on the plans. The plans shall be subject to City review and approval to ensure that the design intent of the Framework has been met.

- E. Garage forward or “snout houses” are highly discouraged on all residential development as they dominate the view from the street and sidewalk.

The following standards shall apply to all development in The COR:

- A. All sides of buildings shall have an equal finish in terms of materials and general design.
- B. The main entrance of each principal building must face the street. On corner lots, the main entrance may face either of the streets or be oriented to the corner. With buildings that have more than one main entrance, only one entrance must meet this requirement.
- C. Building massing shall be oriented parallel to the street frontage of the lot.
- D. Trash and recycling areas shall be designed internal to the building.
- E. Buildings elevations shall be articulated to reduce the mass of the building. Large blank exterior walls shall be prohibited. Windows are encouraged to be used to break up the mass of the building.
- F. Provide recessed entries wherever possible.
- G. Buildings shall have a base and top to the architecture.
- H. Building materials shall be high-quality durable materials, such as glass, stone, brick, windows, canvas awnings, etc.
 1. Use local sources if available
 2. Siding is not allowed (vinyl, metal, wood) except as a complimentary use

3. Use clear or lightly tinted glass for all windows and doors – mirrored, reflective or highly tinted glazing is not acceptable
 4. Metal and wood components are acceptable as a complimentary, not primary, building material
 5. COR1 sub-district buildings shall be primarily brick or a comparable alternative and shall comprise a minimum of 50% of the non-glazed wall area
- I. Promote multiple stories as the norm in this sub-district, but occasional single story buildings are acceptable; single story buildings should not dominate any street frontage and should be a minimum of 20 feet to the roofline.
 - J. Maximize glass openings for all ground level, street front façades – especially for retail, restaurant and other commercial uses – recommend 50% minimum of total ground level façade, or demonstrate great design through other means.
 - K. Provide real window openings for all street facing façades above ground level –a minimum of 40% of total façade is recommended.
 - L. Provide a diverse mix of materials, applied in a variety of proportions, exposures and detailing within a block, or along a street.

Residential uses in COR4 and COR 5 must comply with the following:

- A. Location of main entrance
 1. A building must include a front porch or stoop at all main entrances that face a street. The porch or stoop shall adjoin the main entrance and the main entrance shall be accessible from the porch.
 2. The main entrance of each principal building must face the street. On corner lots, the main entrance may face either of the streets or be oriented to the corner. With buildings that have more than one main entrance, only one entrance must meet this requirement.
- B. Porches: Porches used to satisfy the design criteria shall comply with the following:
 1. Porches shall be covered by a solid roof. The roof shall not be located more than 12 feet above the floor of the porch. If the roof of a required porch is developed as a deck or balcony, it may be flat.
 2. The porch shall have minimum dimensions of 6 feet by 6 feet. For single-family detached dwelling units, the covered area provided by the porch must be at least 48 square feet and a minimum of 8 feet wide. If the main entrance is for more than one dwelling unit, the covered area provided by the porch must be at least 63 square feet and a minimum of 9 feet wide.
- C. Covered balconies: The covered area provided by the balcony must be at least 48 square feet, a minimum of 8 feet wide, and no more than 15 feet above grade. The covered balcony must be accessible from the interior living space of the house.

- D. Openings between porch floor and ground: Openings of more than 1 foot between the porch floor and the ground must be covered with a solid material or lattice.

E. Roofs

1. Slope: Principal structures must have a roof that is sloped, with a pitch that is no flatter than six units of horizontal run to 12 units of horizontal rise.
2. Architectural features: The roof of a principal structure shall include the following architectural details:
 - a. At least one dormer facing the street. If only one dormer is included, it shall be at least 5 feet wide and shall be centered horizontally between each end of the front elevation. If more than one dormer is provided, a dormer at least 4 feet wide must be provided on each side of the front elevation; or
 - b. A gabled end, or a gabled end of a roof projection, facing the street.
3. Roof eaves: Roof eaves must project from the building wall at least 12 inches, measured horizontally, on at least the front and side elevations.

Sub-District Framework - COR1 Mixed Use Core

Public Realm / Streetscape

Public realm and streetscape improvements define the character of The COR and create a memorable signature for the Mixed Use Core sub-district. Great parks and great streets, encourage intensified levels of activity, support the proposed mix of uses, invite community gathering and accommodate special events throughout the year.

Insert Streetscape standards (to be provided by city staff):

Site Development

Framework that address building location, organization of space and parking options tend to focus on what can be measured – dimensions, setbacks, number of spaces and so on. But in addition to these issues, site Design Framework must also describe the aesthetic qualities and design character of a preferred ‘urban form’ for the Mixed Use Core. The compact and higher density blocks that define this sub-district encourage a mix of uses, with a continuous built edge along street frontage. Innovative parking strategies support this mix, providing easy access to destination shopping, restaurant and entertainment venues. Together these elements will promote the core area as the center of activity – the place to see and be seen within The COR.

Architecture

Buildings in the Mixed Use Core will play a major role in defining the overall character of The COR. The proposed mix of uses for this signature destination suggests the potential for a variety of building types, demanding creativity and innovation to highlight unique architecture, while knitting the entire sub-district together as a coherent whole. Overall building design is an important consideration, but emphasis on first floor façade treatments is essential to encourage street-level activity and enhance the pedestrian experience. Architecture to be ‘4-sided’ at all locations visible to public areas. Emphasis to be on great design along public street frontage. Architecture framework standards include the following:

1. Residential density is based on the net area of the parcel in question for parcels. In the event that public open space that is not dedicated to the City is developed independently of any particular residential project, the land area of the open space shall be divided equally among those abutting projects for purposes of density calculations.
 2. Build to line shall be measured from building front to edge of right-of-way, or edge of sidewalk easement as defined by the City and said sidewalk must be encumbered by a sidewalk easement recorded with the office of the Anoka County Recorder.
 3. The City may approve up to a 60-foot setback if it finds that topography or other factors require that a building be set back further to achieve acceptable grades or buffer between the street, the site entrance and the building.
- A. At least 60% of street frontage of any lot shall be occupied by building facades meeting this build-to-line. Lots with more than one street frontage, the build to line shall apply on each side fronting a street. An enclosed open area plaza space or outdoor seating with a decorative wall with a minimum height of three feet (3') and a maximum of four and one-half feet (4 ½') can be used to meet the 60% street frontage requirement.
- B. Screening Of Parking Areas: Wherever a surface parking area faces a street frontage, such frontage shall be screened with a decorative wall, railing, hedge, or a combination of these elements, to a minimum height of three feet (3') and a maximum height of four and one-half feet (4 ½') above the level of the parking lot, at the build-to line. This screening may be broken into sections along the street edges provided it meets the 60% required.

Sub-District Framework - COR2 Commercial

Public Realm / Streetscape

While the Commercial Sub-district encourages a mix of large and small floor plates, accommodating auto-oriented uses, this suggests even greater attention be paid to public realm and streetscape improvements that not only accommodate vehicles, but also invite bicycle and pedestrian traffic. Surface parking lots provide convenient access to storefronts, but present an additional challenge to the overall visual character and aesthetic appeal of this area. While no large public parks are identified for this sub-district, small pocket parks, squares or other gathering spaces are encouraged. A consistent, attractive streetscape is also essential.

Insert Streetscape standards (to be provided by city staff):

- Sidewalk width
- Tree species and size (by block, by street)
- Tree spacing
- Hardscape requirements (planter boxes, benches, trash, etc.)
- Lighting

Site Development

Site Design Framework for this sub-district focus on a unique opportunity to recast typical commercial development patterns into a contemporary and innovative strategy that responds to overall objectives for The COR. Specifically this suggests that the majority of buildings front on the primary through streets, with parking and service areas on the side or in the back, away from view. However, the market realities suggest that the types of auto-oriented users in this district will have the potential for larger parking fields and drive-throughs that will make a true urban model challenging. However, the City will hold all users to this design vision while modifying the COR2 standards slightly to accommodate these types of more typical suburban land uses. A mix of uses within individual blocks, including retail, restaurant and residential, further enhances this model, addresses design character/aesthetics and promotes activity throughout much of the day and evening hours.

Architecture

Buildings in the Commercial Sub-district make a significant contribution to first impressions of The COR. Buildings form gateways at the major entries into the site, architectural elements and choice of materials convey a certain character and the scale or massing of structures begins to define the feel or experience of this place. These are not just 'commodity' buildings, but instead should raise the bar in terms of overall design and specific details that make The COR unique, inviting and memorable. Architecture to be '4-sided' at all locations visible to public areas. Emphasis to be on great design along public street frontage.

 2. The City may approve a variation from the required build to line if the applicant provides a street edge consisting of fencing, decorative wall and/or landscaping with a minimum height of three feet (3') and a maximum of four and one-half feet (4 ½') can be used to meet the 40% street frontage requirement.
- B. Screening Of Parking Areas: Wherever a surface parking area faces a street frontage, such frontage shall be screened with a decorative wall, railing, hedge, or a combination of these elements, to a minimum height of three feet (3') and a maximum height of four and one-half feet (4 ½') above the level of the parking lot, at the build-to line. This screening may be broken into sections along the street edges provided it meets the 40% required.

Sub-District Framework - COR3 Workplace

Public Realm/Streetscape

The Workplace Sub-district also encourages a mix of large and small floor plate buildings, but instead of commercial or entertainment, this area of The COR is dominated by office and institutional uses. With opportunities for corporate or medical campus development comes the attendant auto-related infrastructure – easy access, bigger streets and large surface parking lots. Once again, this suggests that equal attention be paid to public realm and streetscape improvements that not only accommodate vehicles, but also invite bicycle and pedestrian traffic. The Draw, an active, neighborhood scale, recreational play space has been proposed for this sub-district, but small pocket parks, squares or other gathering places are also encouraged. In addition, streetscape improvements provide an important public amenity and inviting pedestrian connection to adjacent sub-districts.

- Sidewalk width
- Tree species and size (by block, by street)
- Tree spacing
- Hardscape requirements (planter boxes, benches, trash, etc.)
- Lighting

Site Development

The mix of medical, office, institutional and other uses in this sub-district suggest the potential for a campus-like arrangement of buildings on some blocks. These blocks would tend to be more internally oriented than in other districts, with driveways, parking lots, courtyards and walkway connections in the center, ringed by buildings around the outside. Buildings would still face adjacent streets, with both primary and secondary entries provided to animate these important façades, particularly along Ramsey Boulevard, Sunwood Drive and Rhinestone Street. While the Workplace sub-district also encourages mixed use, this desired development objective will likely occur mostly within blocks, not within individual buildings as seen in other districts.

Architecture

Buildings in the Workplace Sub-district also make a significant contribution to first impressions as people enter The COR via Highway 10, Ramsey Boulevard and Sunwood Drive. Buildings form gateways at the major entries into the site, architectural elements and choice of materials convey quality and permanence, and the scale or massing of structures begins to define the feel and character of this place. The proposed mix of uses within this sub-district suggest a variety of potential building types – blending medical campus with small office, storefront and some housing demands design creativity and innovation to highlight unique architecture, and knit the entire sub-district together as a coherent whole. Architecture to be ‘4-sided’ at all locations visible to public areas. Emphasis to be on great design along public street frontage. Architecture guidelines include the following:

Sub-District Framework - COR4 Neighborhood

Public Realm/Streetscape

Two prominent public parks supply much of the informal green space for The COR, and more specifically, provide the valuable park frontage and mix of amenities needed to support housing development within the Neighborhood Sub-district. North Commons surrounds an existing wetland and provides open space for year-round activities including a proposed sledding hill. The sub-district is adjacent to The Draw, which is characterized by wetlands, ponds and a meandering stream channel surrounded by gently sloping hills. Other park features include active and passive recreation areas, natural and manicured landscapes, education and interpretation opportunities, pedestrian and bicycle trails and many other amenities. Tree-lined streets connect these parks to surrounding residential neighborhoods and to nearby parks and amenities throughout The COR.

- Sidewalk width
- Tree species and size (by block, by street)

Site Development

The Neighborhood Sub-district emphasizes residential development. To support the proposed mix of housing, a framework of streets and blocks, based on the traditional grid system, encourages compact development patterns with increasing densities closer to the heart of The COR. Typical blocks either front onto signature parks or include some private green space within the site; many blocks have both. The arterial streets that frame this property, including Ramsey, Armstrong and Bunker Lake Boulevards, provide an important 'face' for this sub-district. Residential front doors will connect with public walks along each of these streets promoting the urban character of The COR.

Architecture

The largest in terms of overall acreage, the Neighborhood Sub-district will define the character and quality of the entire northern half of The COR property. With prominent street frontage along most of the major thoroughfares that serve this site, the variety of choices for building type, architectural style and design detailing are crucial decisions that together will promote a safe and attractive residential neighborhood. Integrating contemporary and traditional styles is also an important consideration, central to the notion that a unique and creative model for housing development will be a signature for The COR. Architecture to be '4-sided' at all locations visible to public areas. Emphasis to be on great design along public street frontage. Architecture framework guidelines include the following:

Sub-District Framework - COR5 Parks & Open Space

Public Realm/Streetscape

The overall structure of The COR is based on a system of linked parks, trails and open space. This includes existing and proposed parks and trails defined in city and regional parks plans, joined with new parks and trails within The COR. Of equal importance is the contribution from each block and each development project to this green structure, adding a variety of private, semi-private and perhaps some additional public space throughout each sub-district. Great strolling streets provide connections between commercial, workplace, entertainment and residential neighborhoods and encourage shared use for cars, pedestrians and bicycles.

- Sidewalk width
- Tree species and size (by block, by street)
- Tree spacing
- Hardscape requirements (planter boxes, benches, trash, etc.)

Site Development

The COR Master Plan illustrates a strong framework of green space, including a mix of public parks, destination amenities, courtyards, commons and other features. As a key component of the overall plan, this integrated system of parks, trails and open space provides the framework around which all other land uses are organized. Placemaking and connectivity are important site development considerations, linking each block and each sub-district with major public spaces nearby and with many other amenities and attractions in The COR.

Architecture

There are numerous opportunities to include buildings and other structures as significant design features within the proposed parks, trails and open space system for The COR. These could range from simple picnic shelters and landscaped arbors to more complex park buildings that might contain meeting rooms, rest rooms, storage areas and other facilities. Design of these important buildings should respond to the specific setting and landscape features in each park, and complement the overall character and quality of buildings located within surrounding blocks. Additionally, limited retail is planned along the perimeter of the park. Architecture guidelines include the following:

Implementation

Introduction

This framework recommends distinct strategies for guiding The COR's form and appearance. This framework's vision for the COR will take several years to implement. Successful implementation will require consistent application of the Design Framework by City staff. Zoning enforcement and design framework standards will not succeed without the cooperation and commitment of landowners, development interests, and the rest of the community.

Design Review

The Design Framework will be administered by staff as part of the development review process. Staff will incorporate design review to ensure compliance with the Design Framework as a standard step in the development review process.

The streetscape within The COR will be designed in relationship to the road designations and subdistricts. The streetscape along Sunwood Dr (Destination Street) will mirror the existing streetscape already in place, including planter boxes, street trees, shrubs, perennials, benches and street lights. Streetscape along Parkway and Connector Streets will similarly resemble existing streetscapes, along streets such as Rhinestone St and E Ramsey Parkway, including the use of street trees, street lights and boulevard sod. Finally, along Downtown Streets, which represent the most urban section of street within The COR, streetscape components again should resemble existing streetscape elements including street trees, street lights and boulevard sod.

The 'green' component of the streetscape should be considered at the outset of any project. Assuring adequate soil volume, which equates to sufficient rooting area, is of utmost importance to provide street trees satisfactory growing space. This begins with providing wider boulevard areas to promote root growth. In certain instances where wider boulevards may not be feasible, the use of innovative products such as structural soils, silva cells and others would be strongly encouraged. Additionally, Best Management Practices (BMPs) are also encouraged to help sustain the 'green' component of the streetscape. Creativity with stormwater management, for instance, could provide irrigation for street trees and boulevard sod.

Both function and form are important when designing the 'green' component of the streetscape. There should be an emphasis on species diversity to buffer against pests and pathogens. The species layout should attempt to cluster species by groupings or blocks to provide some symmetry while avoiding over-planting of any one species or genus. Attention must also be paid to putting the right trees in the right places, considering all potential constraints (soil volume, horizontal and vertical obstructions, adaptability to harsher growing environments, etc) and potential pollutants, most specifically, deicing salts.

Design and layout of street trees must also consider spacing guidelines not only from tree to tree but also consider avoiding site line obstructions near intersections as well as the vision clearance triangle. Spacing between individual trees depends, at least in part, on the species and its' associated growth characteristics as well as the spatial design (groupings, linear, both sides of a sidewalk, etc). The intent is to provide an attractive, inviting space while also ensuring sufficient space (above and below ground) to provide a habitable growing environment for the plantings.

Title:

Discussion of Metropolitan Council's 2040 Framework Plan Process

Background:

Minnesota Statute Chapter 473 requires that communities within the seven-county metropolitan area submit Comprehensive Plans for land use to the Metropolitan Council for approval every ten (10) years. The Metropolitan Council is currently preparing to update its Regional Development Framework following completion of the 2010 Census. This is the first step in preparation for the 2040 Comprehensive Plan Update, due in 2018. This is a critical piece in the process, as it will serve as the foundation of future land use decisions the City will be required to make as part of its 2040 Comprehensive Plan Update. This Regional Development Framework will lead to such decisions as expansion (if any) of the Metropolitan Urban Service Area (MUSA), future land use/zoning designations, and infrastructure needed to accommodate land use patterns.

Notification:

No notification required at this time.

Observations:

The regional planning cycle begins with the completion of the 2010 Census. The Metropolitan Council then uses that data to analyze trends and review prior forecasts (households, population, employment). The current process is to update the Regional Development Framework, scheduled to be completed between 2011-2013. The next step is to update the Regional System Plans (Wastewater, Transportation, Regional Parks and Open Space, and Airports). The System Plans are anticipated to be updated between 2013-2015. System Statements will then be prepared for individual communities summarizing regional impacts and growth forecasts for the local community in 2015. This step begins the local Comprehensive Plan Update process, with plans due by the end of 2018.

Based on current population, household, and employment estimates from the 2010 Census, it appears that forecasts found in the the 2030 Comprehensive Plan will need to be revised. Although eventual population forecasts may be reached, it will likely be beyond 2030 as originally forecasted. This is also dependent on the community's desire to reach the ultimate population originally forecasted in the 2030 Comprehensive Plan.

The purpose of this case is to simply bring the Planning Commission up to speed on the Metropolitan Council process to ensure that the City is in the best position to respond to future forecasts as they become available. Much of the feedback from the 2030 Update process was that there was not ample opportunity during that stage to discuss future growth forecasts. Staff desires to ensure that the community does have ample opportunity to respond during this update to the Regional Framework. Staff will also be compiling data on other Comprehensive Plan Amendments that impact growth forecasts from the original 2030 Comprehensive Plan to be used in discussion of Regional Development Framework and Regional Plans.

Regional Benchmarks Measuring Our Progress

Between 2000 and 2030, the seven-county metropolitan area is projected to grow by nearly one million people. The 2030 Regional Development Framework, adopted in 2004, provides a plan for how the Metropolitan Council—in partnership with local communities and others—can guide our region’s growth and shape our future.

The 2030 Regional Development Framework organized the Council’s strategies around four policies:

- 1. Accommodating growth in a flexible, connected and efficient manner.
- 2. Slowing the growth in traffic congestion and improving mobility.
- 3. Encouraging expanded choices in housing locations and types.
- 4. Working to conserve, protect and enhance the region’s vital natural resources.

Many of the goals and objectives established in the Regional Development Framework are ambitious. Our success will hinge on the efforts of not only the Metropolitan Council but also local communities and our other regional partners. They will also require the commitment of additional resources—particularly in the areas of highways and transit—in the coming years.

To measure the progress of our region toward achieving the Framework goals, the Council established a series of benchmarks and directed staff to provide annual updates. This report is the seventh such update.

UPDATED: September 12, 2011

1. Accommodating Growth

- Housing Construction

2000 Baseline: 1,047,240 housing units
2030 Target: 1,537,000 housing units

2010 Actual: 1,186,986 housing units

To house the forecasted population and household growth, the region will need to add nearly 490,000 housing units between 2000 and 2030. The original benchmark anticipated that 18,000 units per year would be necessary in the 2000-10 decade while slowing growth rates by the 2020-2030 decade would make 16,000 units per year sufficient.

In the first half of this decade, housing stock gains surpassed the annual benchmark, reaching a peak with 2004's units permitted and 2005's net growth. Though the slowdown in permitting began in 2005, average net housing production from 2001 to 2006 was nearly 18,500 units per year. Over the last four years, however, average net housing production fell by more than half to 7,448 units per year with 2010 at 5,250 units, just 24 percent of 2005's production. New housing units permitted rose slightly to 5,761 units in 2010, the third lowest in the 40 years the Council has monitored building permits in the region.

On average, 13,502 housing units were added annually over the period, below the long-range goal of 16,000 to 18,000 units. Had housing growth remained at the torrid pace seen earlier in the first half of the decade, the region would have added an additional 33,000 units over the last four years.

Note: Net growth estimates reflect: estimated completions of the previous year's permitted units; conversions of non-residential structures into housing; units moved in or out of a community; units annexed in and out of a community; housing demolitions; and housing units converted into non-residential structures.

Housing Unit Production

• Location of New Housing

2030 Targets:

- Developed Area: 133,000 units net growth, 2000-30 (27 percent or 4,400 units per year)
- Developing Area: 285,000 units net growth, 2000-30 (59 percent or 9,500 units per year)
- Rural Centers: 27,000 units of net growth, 2000-30 (6 percent or 900 units per year)
- Remaining Rural Area: no more than 40,000 units net growth, 2000-30 (8 percent or less than 1,300 units per year)

The geographic distribution of housing development from 2000 to 2010 is in line with benchmark expectations: the central cities and developed suburbs accounted for 31 percent of the region's net housing growth; the developing suburbs, 59 percent; the rural centers, 5 percent; and the remaining rural areas, 5 percent. Relative to the growth targets, slightly more of the growth has occurred in the developed area and slightly less in rural areas which represents a more efficient use of regional infrastructure.

2010 Actuals:

- Developed Area: 42,853 units net growth, 2000-10 (31 percent)
- Developing Area: 83,484 units net growth, 2000-10 (59 percent)
- Rural Centers: 6,891 units of net growth, 2000-10 (5 percent)
- Remaining Rural Area: 7,102 units net growth, 2000-10 (5 percent)

Housing Unit Net Growth by Location

The amount of development occurring in the developing areas as a percentage of the region's total growth has increased over the last several years. In 2001, 67 percent of the growth was in the developing areas. This decreased to 54 percent in 2007, but increased to 65 percent in 2010, which is above the 59 percent desired in the growth targets.

- Regional Employment Growth

2000 Baseline:	1,607,916 jobs
2030 Target:	2,126,000 jobs or, on average, 17,300 jobs added per year
2010 Actual:	1,542,000 jobs or, on average, -6,600 jobs lost per year

Two recessions over the last decade dragged regional employment trends below the benchmark growth rate. The 2030 employment forecasts ventured an increase of 518,000 jobs between 2000 and 2030. To meet this forecasted growth, regional employment must grow an annual average of 17,300 jobs from 2000 to 2030. So far, from 2000 to 2010, regional employment has shrunk by an average of 6,600 jobs per year. Most of these job losses followed the Great Recession (2007-08); however, the 2001 recession and its subsequent jobless recovery also dampened annual job growth rates. Even before the Great Recession, regional employment grew at an annual rate of 3,400 jobs from 2000-2007 (20% of the annual benchmark rate).

Relative to the largest metropolitan areas, Twin Cities' job growth over the last decade fell within the bottom half. The Minneapolis-St. Paul Metropolitan Statistical Area (MSA) ranked 18th among the 25 largest U.S. metropolitan areas on job growth from 2000 to 2010. Minneapolis-St. Paul MSA job growth during this period was more typical when compared with the largest metropolitan areas in the Midwest and Northeast—the Twin Cities ranked 5th among the largest Midwestern and Northeastern metropolitan areas.

Sources: Quarterly Census of Employment and Wages, Minnesota Department of Employment and Economic Development; Current Employment Statistics, Bureau of Labor Statistics, U.S. Department of Labor.

- Employment Distribution – 2030 Net Growth

2000-30 Target:

Developed Area:	286,561 jobs (55 percent or 9,600 jobs per year)
Developing Area:	215,712 jobs (41 percent or 7,200 jobs per year)
Rural Growth Centers:	7,443 jobs (1 percent or 250 jobs per year)
Remaining Rural Area:	11,579 jobs (2 percent or 390 jobs per year)

2000-10 Actual:

Developed Area:	-102,815 jobs (-10,282 jobs per year)
Developing Area:	36,078 jobs (3,608 jobs per year)
Rural Growth Centers:	-69 jobs (-7 jobs per year)
Remaining Rural Area:	1,876 jobs (188 jobs per year)

The Great Recession deflated employment growth in communities across various development stages, from the central cities to suburbs and rural areas. Both of the last decade's recessions hit the region's developed core hardest. The developed areas—i.e., Minneapolis, St. Paul, and surrounding fully developed suburbs—suffered considerable job losses during the 2001 recession, and never regained 2000-level employment before the Great Recession hit in 2007.

With an annual average loss of over 10,300 total jobs, the developed area lags far behind its benchmark growth rate of 9,600 jobs per year. While the developing area as a whole experienced continuous job growth from 2000 to 2008, its employment began to fall in 2006. The developed communities are currently at 50 percent of their annual benchmark job growth rate of 7,200 jobs per year. Rural area employment levels advanced more moderately from 2000 to 2008, and suffered more modest job losses between 2008 and 2010. The annual average growth in rural areas is more in line with the growth forecasted for these areas.

Regional Distribution of Employment Growth, 2000-2010

Note: While the Metropolitan Council adjusted the designations of eight communities from Developing to Developed with the 2008 Comprehensive Plan Updates, this analysis used the prior categorization to maintain continuity.

2. Improving Transportation

- Highway Capacity

2000 Baseline: 1,485 lane-miles of freeway
 2030 Trend Line: 300 additional lane-miles of freeway
 2030 Target: 1,786 lane miles of freeway

Almost 30 additional lane-miles were added to the system in 2010. I-35W added 17.08 lane miles; Highway 62 added 7.95 lane miles; and I-494 added 4.69 lane miles.

Lane-miles added has averaged 18.4 annually over the measurement period—84 percent above the long-term target of 10 miles per year.

Source: Minnesota Department of Transportation

- Daily Roadway Usage

2000 Baseline: 25.9 vehicle miles per capita
 2030 Target: 25.9 vehicle miles per capita

2010 Actual: 25.6 vehicle miles per capita

Vehicle miles traveled (VMT) tracks the total amount of travel on the region's roadways. Since the first travel behavior survey in 1949, both the average number of trips taken daily by each individual and the average length of trips have grown. As a result, the amount of travel on the region's roadways has grown substantially faster than population. However, with higher gasoline prices, increased environmental awareness and high unemployment continuing through 2010, these trends seem to be stabilizing. Daily travel per capita in 2010 was the same (25.6 miles) on average as 2009, the lowest level since the Council started monitoring this indicator.

Source: Minnesota Department of Transportation

- Roadway Congestion

2000 Baseline: 48 hours per peak-hour traveler spent in congestion per year

2030 Target: 64 hours

Annual Indicator: No more than 1 percent growth per year

2009 Actual: 43 hours

The goal is to keep the increase in delay below 1 percent a year. The estimated time a peak-hour traveler spent in congestion was at least equal or higher than the 2000 baseline until 2009. Throughout this time series, the number of hours per peak-hour traveler spent in congestion has been near the baseline of 48 hours, with only two years above 50 hours, suggesting relative stability in this measure.

Overall regional performance continues to be well below the target of increasing no more than 1 percent growth per year. 2009's low figure reflects that year's high unemployment rate. Looking ahead, the continued economic slump is likely to keep congestion low through 2011. 2010 data will be available later in 2011.

Note: The Texas Transportation Institute updated their historical time series with their 2009 data release. Their previous time series had a 2000 value of 41 hours, serving as a baseline for a 2030 target of 55 hours. This Benchmarks update incorporates the new methodology and increases the 2030 target to 64 hours, maintaining a constant increase from the previous methodology.

Source: Texas Transportation Institute, 2010 Urban Mobility Study

- Transit Service

2002 Baseline: 42.4 million vehicle revenue miles per year
 2030 Trend Line: 42 million vehicle revenue miles (assuming no growth)
 2030 Target: 89 million vehicle revenue miles

2010 Actual: 48.1 million vehicle revenue miles

Since the 2002 baseline, service has expanded by 13.4 percent with 2010 the highest service year over the measurement period at 48.1 million vehicle revenue miles. The growth from 2009 to 2010 resulted primarily from the addition of Northstar commuter rail service, restructuring of the Council's general public dial-a-ride program, and an increase in demand for Metro Mobility services.

The target since 2006 is 3 percent annual growth. Stable 3 percent annual growth from 2006 through 2010 would represent 52.5 million vehicle revenue miles, about 4 million miles above the 2010 actual.

Note: This is a system-wide measure, including Metro Transit, Metro Mobility, contracted services, suburban transit providers, intercampus service at the University of Minnesota, and the vanpool program.

Source: Metro Transit and Metropolitan Transportation Services, Metropolitan Council.

- Transit Ridership

2003 Baseline: 73.3 million riders per year
 2030 Trend Line: 73.3 million riders (assuming no growth)
 2030 Target: 147 million riders

2010 Actual: 90.9 million riders

Regional transit ridership has grown over 21 percent since 2002 with the 2004 addition of University of Minnesota service to the regional public transit system (about 3.5 million riders) and overall expansion. Annual growth had been above the target of building ridership 3 percent annually since 2006 until 2009 when high unemployment led to a 6 percent drop in ridership. Upwardly trending gasoline prices, an improved economy, and ridership to Twins games at the newly-opened Target Field in 2010 helped transit ridership grow 2 percent over 2009.

Source: Metro Transit and Metropolitan Transportation Services, Metropolitan Council.

- Peak Period Transit Capacity

2000 Baseline: 2.28 million peak-period seat miles
 2030 Trend Line: 2.28 million peak-period seat miles (assuming no growth)
 2030 Target: 4.56 million peak-period seat miles

2010 Actual: 2.89 million peak-period seat miles

The goal is to increase peak-period transit capacity by 3 percent annually, beginning in 2006, and ultimately double peak-period transit capacity by 2030. Peak seat miles increased from 2.84 million in December 2009 to 2.89 million in December 2010. This increase was the result of incremental growth in core local and express service to meet growing ridership, introduction of service to new park and rides in Eagan and Maple Grove, expansion of park and ride service in Shakopee and new service in the Rush Line corridor between Forest Lake and downtown Saint Paul. Metro Transit began use of three-car trains on the Hiawatha Line, increasing peak seat miles but decreasing overall service hours.

- Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport Runway Congestion

2002 Baseline: 7.1 minutes average annual aircraft delay

2030 Trend Line: 9.8 minutes

2030 Target: 7.1 minutes

2010 Actual: 5.1 minutes

The 2010 average annual delay per aircraft operation was 5.1 minutes, down 0.5 minutes from 2009. In 2010, the Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport (MSP) served 32 million passengers, 15th highest among airports in North America.

Aircraft activity at the airport edged up by 0.02 percent from 2009 to 437,075 landings and takeoffs in 2010 to be the 12th busiest airfield in the United States. This is the first year that operations have increased since 2004. After years of a depressed global economy and high fuel costs, operations increased in 2010 as a result of expanded air freight, general aviation and military operations. Operations are forecast to be flat with a gradual increase in the next five years. Delta completed its merger with Northwest Airlines on January 31, 2010 and reduced the integrated flight schedule through 2010.

Airport congestion
 (Minutes average annual aircraft delay)

Delay levels at the Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport this year are likely to remain close to 2010 levels, but aviation forecasts indicate about a 40 percent increase in aircraft operations by 2030. New runway capacity was not included in the recently approved MSP 2030 development plan, but future delay is to be addressed through application of the Federal Aviation Administration's NextGen aircraft and airspace management program.

3. Housing Choices

- Single Family Housing Units

2030 Growth Target: 242,500 units added
2000-10 Actual: 57,430 units added

The target for single-family detached housing production acknowledges that roughly half of the overall housing unit target of 16,000 to 18,000 units per year is likely to be single-family detached housing. For context, 58 percent of the existing housing stock is single-family detached, so the goal recognizes that demand for attached housing is increasing relative to historic norms.

2010 marked a new high in the share of net growth in single-family housing, with 56 percent of the total growth. Since 2001, 41 percent of the net growth in housing has been single-family detached, varying from a high of 56 percent in 2010 to a low of 34 percent in 2005—a peak of attached housing construction.

Source: Metropolitan Council Research.

- Townhouse/Multifamily units

2030 Growth Target: 242,500 units added
2000-10 Actual: 83,255 units added

The target of 8,000-10,000 new townhouse/multifamily housing permits per year, on average, reflects the objective of providing the region's residents with a range of life-cycle and affordable housing options. An evolving demographic mix and emerging generational preferences have led to significant construction of attached units, peaking at over 14,000 added in 2005 and representing two-thirds of net growth in housing units. While townhouse and attached housing growth remains at 59 percent of overall housing growth since 2001, it was only 44 percent in 2010, indicating a continued reversal of this decade's trend of significant attached housing construction.

- Affordable Housing – 2010 Needs

Affordable Owner Target: 84,981 units added 1996-2010
 Affordable Renter Target: 15,840 units added 1996-2010

Affordable Owner Actual: 40,168 units added 1996-2010
Affordable Renter Actual: 11,873 units added 1996-2010

Affordable Owner-Occupied Housing Units Added Per Year

The production of affordable owner-occupied housing has fallen far short of the goals set for the fifteen-year period of 1996 to 2010. Looking just at the units built in the last decade, an era of overall intense housing production, average annual production of affordable owner-occupied housing, 2,371 units, has been less than half (42 percent) of the target of 5,665 units per year.

Housing costs are considered affordable if they consume no more than 30 percent of household income. For the 1996 to 2010 period, the Council defined annual affordability thresholds based on the housing budget of households earning 80 percent of the area median family income for owner-occupied housing and 50 percent of median for rental housing.

From 1996-2010, the region fell short of its goal of nearly 85,000 owner-occupied affordable units by almost 45,000 units, adding only 40,168 units.

Affordable Rental Housing Units Added Per Year

Similarly, the production of affordable rental housing has fallen short of the goals set for the fifteen-year period of 1996 to 2010 though far less than for owner-occupied housing. Looking just at the units built in the last decade, an era of overall intense housing production, average annual production of affordable rental housing, 864 units, has been almost 82 percent of the target of 1,056 units per year.

From 1996-2010, the region fell short of its targeted goal of nearly 16,000 affordable rental units by almost 4,000 units, adding only 11,873 units.

Housing costs are considered affordable if they consume no more than 30 percent of household income. For the 1996 to 2010 period, the Council defined annual affordability thresholds based on the housing budget of households earning 80 percent of the area median family income for owner-occupied housing and 50 percent of median for rental housing.

- Housing Affordability: Homes sold at prices affordable to median income family

2000 Baseline:	75.0 percent affordable in metro area (vs. 59.7 percent national average)
2030 Target:	75.0 percent affordable in metro area
2010 Actual:	85.2 percent affordable in metro area
Annual indicator:	Region's housing affordability should remain 15 points ahead of the national average
2010 Actual:	Region's housing affordability 12.6 points ahead of the national average of 72.6

Changes in regional housing affordability generally have followed national trends, but the differences are getting closer according to the National Association of Home Builders / Wells Fargo Housing Opportunity Index. The Index dropped in the middle of this decade as housing prices outpaced income growth. As the housing boom ended and home prices began to fall, the index increased to show a near historic high level of affordability in 2010 for the Minneapolis-St. Paul MSA and a historic high for the U.S. (note that the NAHB did not calculate the index from the 2nd quarter of 2002 through the 3rd quarter of 2003).

The percentage of affordable homes sold in the 13-county Minneapolis-St. Paul area continues to be higher than the national average, but the gap has shrunk steadily from 2006 (19.5 percent difference) to 2010 (12.6 percent difference). The 2010 levels have remained above the overall target that 75 percent of the homes be affordable to the median income, but the region failed to meet the goal of maintaining a 15-point spread between the metro and the U.S. index in both 2009 and 2010.

4. Environment

• Water Quality

Goal: The quality of the water leaving the metro area is as good as the water's quality entering the metro area and in compliance with federal and state regulations.

Baseline and Targets	Total Phosphorus	Total Nitrogen	Total Suspended Solids
2000 Baseline Input (in tons per year)	4,380	80,800	1,320,000
2000 Baseline Output (in tons per year)	3,840	80,900	956,000
2000 Baseline Difference (in tons per year)	-540 (-12 percent)	100 (0 percent)	-364,000 (-28 percent)
2030 Target	Output is no more than in 2000 and output-input difference is held to 0.

Due to the Twin Cities' location at the northern end of the Mississippi River, Metropolitan Council wastewater treatment plants must meet stringent Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) operating standards. The Council's treatment plants continue to have a near-perfect compliance record, while maintaining rates that are lower than the average for similar-sized sanitary districts.

Wastewater treatment plants in the region and regulations on industrial wastewater are succeeding at removing pollution from the wastewater stream. However, water quality is also affected by nonpoint pollution sources (both urban and agricultural) and year-to-year climate variations.

The indicators for phosphorus, nitrogen, and suspended solids are determined by taking the sum of the loads from the Minnesota River at Jordan, the Rum River in Anoka, the Mississippi River in Anoka, and the St. Croix River in Stillwater, and comparing them to the load at the Mississippi River near Red Wing. Optimally, the difference between the output and input mass would be zero or less. However, there is a statistical uncertainty of about ± 10 percent on both the input and output mass, and pollutant loading varies from year to year. Use of a 10-year median as an indicator helps to minimize, though not eliminate, variability from annual climate differences and other natural sources.

The output levels of the studied pollutants, with the exception of nitrogen, remained stable in 2010 and improved compared to 2000. Some variability from year to year is expected due to weather conditions and sampling error. Despite variability, the general trend for phosphorus and suspended solids over 2000-10 has been downward (improving).

The output level of nitrogen remains higher than the input level, although both are significantly lower compared to 2000.

- Water Supply

Goal: To ensure the metropolitan area's water resources are adequate to supply future water demands without adverse impacts.

Baseline Input: The Master Water Supply Plan projects future water use based on past water use and identifies water supply sources available to each community.

Rainfall in 2010 was above normal for the first time in four years. However, low precipitation during the summer months still resulted in relatively high demand for outdoor watering and an overall municipal water use of 127 gallons per day per capita.

Another measure of water availability is a comparison of groundwater recharge to groundwater withdrawals. In 2010, approximately 99,033 million gallons of groundwater were withdrawn from aquifers in the region. This is approximately 25 percent of the estimated annual groundwater recharge. This measure does not consider the local impact of withdrawals or needs for groundwater discharge to surface water features, nor does it consider that much of the water being withdrawn recharged decades earlier, but it does give a general sense of how much of the annual input is being used.

- Air Quality – Pollutants

Goal:	Maintain federal ambient air quality standards for carbon monoxide, ground-level ozone and fine particulates.
2002 Baseline:	Zero violations
2030 Target:	Zero violations
2003-2009:	Zero violations
2010:	Two violations

The pollutant of greatest concern at the time of the adoption of the Framework was carbon monoxide (CO). Although maintenance of attainment status in the region is still a priority, today's greatest threat to attainment of National Ambient Air Quality Standards (NAAQS) is fine particulate matter (PM_{2.5}). The federal standard for fine particulate matter is that the 98th percentile of the 24-hour PM_{2.5} concentrations in a year, averaged over three years, needs to be less than 35 µg/m³. This standard was violated at two monitors in the region in the 2008-2010 reporting period.

Source: Minnesota Pollution Control Agency.

- Air Quality Index

Number of days that air quality was above 100 (unhealthy for sensitive groups)

In planning for improvements to the transportation system, Metropolitan Council conforms to 1990 Clean Air Act Amendments for attaining federal air quality standards. Prior to 1999, the region was classified as not in attainment for carbon monoxide.

An area can be in compliance with federal air quality standards and yet have some days when its air quality is rated "unhealthy" by the EPA's uniform index. Repeated alert days for a pollutant may be an indicator of a rising risk. Hot summers provide conditions for higher ozone levels and more alert days.

Air Quality Index
(Days air categorized as unhealthy for sensitive groups)

In 2010, there were seventeen air quality alerts for fine particulate matter. No alerts were issued for ozone.

The region has had fine particulate levels near the federal standard for some time. The Minnesota Pollution Control Agency attributes the violation in 2008-10 and the unusually high number of air quality alters related to fine particulates in 2009 and 2010 to meteorological conditions caused by a strong El Niño from November 2009 through March 2010.

Executive Report:

Introduction

Growing municipalities commonly anticipate, and in some cases eagerly await, new development. When a new residential development is proposed, or a new businesses campus is planned, municipalities are faced with many questions. These questions regard the impact of a new development on the environment, demand on public safety services, effect on neighboring properties, the impact on existing and/or new public infrastructure, etc. Furthermore, municipalities need to account for the costs of these impacts to public infrastructure along with the costs to review and inspect new developments.

This study, the “2011 Development Costs Study,” aims to understand how different cities assess the costs of new development. The purpose of the study is to supply decision makers with information as they consider policies that will affect future development.

In late April, the City of Ramsey sent a “Development Costs Survey” to several municipalities. Completed surveys were received into June. The following is a report of the findings.

The City of Ramsey would like to thank each participating city for their time and effort in completing the development costs survey—your participation made this survey possible! We hope that this information will be useful for both city staff and elected officials.

Survey Results:

Summary

Each and every city in this survey assesses development costs differently. Some municipalities rely more on developers to install needed infrastructure and to make site improvements than other municipalities. Some municipalities install needed infrastructure and make site improvements independently and then charge developers. Some cities put most of their costs into one part of a building permit and others break down their costs into separate permit fees. Some cities account for nearly all costs through development fees and some cities absorb costs into the general operating budget. Some cities pass on costs to end users rather than developers (i.e. residents and businesses) through utilities and assessments.

Cities also assign expenses in several different ways: flat rates, area specific rates, escrows, per unit rates, per acre rates, type of land use rates, per hour rates, assessments, trunk fees, etc.

Regardless of how development costs are accounted for, and to whom they are charged, the costs are there and they are important to understand. This survey attempts to breakdown the costs of new development and establishes a city-to-city comparison. However, due to the complexity previously referred, a truly apples to apples comparison of development costs is not possible.

The 2011 Development Costs Study displays the complexity of understanding how development costs are accounted for and also reflects a wide range of results from participating cities.

For an overview of the development costs study results please reference:

Development Fee Chart: City of Ramsey

NOTE: This document provides a breakdown of all City of Ramsey development fees. The breakdown includes a description, rationalization and methodology of determining each fee.

Fee/Charge	Description (what is the fee)	Rationalization (the purpose)	Methodology (studies/forecasts to determine what we need to charge)
Sewer Trunk	Oversizing of Pipe. This also offsets some of the initial capital costs for installing the trunk lines that convey flows from the neighborhoods (lateral lines) to the treatment facility.	Ensure Downstream Capacity & reimbursement for capital costs and maintenance activities. This fund is also utilized for corrections, improvements, and extensions of the trunk system.	Comprehensive Sanitary Sewer Study (2004) identified specific improvements needed for long-term system upgrades, and maintenance. The construction index is utilized annually to apply potential rate increases that are reviewed with the City's rates & charges.
Water Trunk	Oversizing of Pipe. This also offsets some of the initial capital costs for installing the trunk lines that convey water from the neighborhoods (lateral lines) to the towers and pump houses.	Ensure sizing of pipes for adequate pressure and fire flows. Also pays for chemicals, pumps, towers, maintenance, etc. that make up the entire water distribution system.	Comprehensive Water Distribution Study (2004) identified specific improvements needed for long-term system upgrades, and maintenance. The construction index is utilized annually to apply potential rate increases that are reviewed with the City's rates & charges.
Storm Water Trunk	Oversizing of Pipe. This also offsets some of the initial capital costs for installing the trunk lines that convey flows from the neighborhoods (lateral lines) to ponding areas, and the receiving water bodies (rivers). PRIMARILY NEW CONSTRUCTION OF FACILITIES.	Ensure adequate sizing of pipes and ponding areas for flood control. Pays for treatment structures, outlet facilities, pumps, maintenance, etc. for the entire stormwater system. Also offsets costs for street sweeping, annual WMO dues, & City MPCA permits.	Surface Water Management Plan (2008) identified specific improvements needed for long-term system upgrades, and maintenance. the subdivision or parcel is evaluated for parks and trail needs. If park land is not needed, the City of Ramsey will accept cash in lieu of physical park dedication. The cash payment is then used for current/future park funding. The same is true for Park Dedication as Trail Fees.

Dedication is calculated based on the size of a development and the density; and is listed within the city's Rates and Charges.

residents of the city and persons working in the city, that the character and quality of the environment be considered to be of major importance in the planning and development of the city. In this regard, the manner in which land is developed and used is of high priority. The preservation of land for park, playground and public open space purposes as it relates to the use and development of land for residential, commercial/industrial purposes is essential to the maintaining of a healthful and desirable environment for all citizens of the city. The city must not only provide these necessary amenities for our citizens today, but also be insightful to the needs of our future citizens (As cited in the Sec. 117-614).

decades – however there have been some minor changes now that greater densities are permitted; and there were formulaic changes for land uses that have demonstrated lower 'demand' for parks and open-space.

Additionally, the acreage/fee structure is reviewed by Council annually, for 'cost of living' adjustments each year as part of the Rates and Charges analysis – however, the last few years there have been no increases.

Further, Ramsey's rates are compared to similar suburban cities in the metropolitan area, as well as our immediate neighbors on an annual basis.

Lastly, park land and improvements themselves are identified within the Parks Capital Improvement Plan – which is adopted each year by City Council. This plan is a reflection of community need, with the forecasted improvements often outpacing revenue from Park Dedication and Trail Fees.

Street/Traffic Signs	Used to pay the costs of City installed signage on development projects.	Pays the material and installation costs for projects that the developer requests the City to perform sign installation.	Contained within the development agreement for all projects as a stage 2 improvement. Only charged if developer requests, otherwise could be installed under private contract. Amount based upon the history of costs to install
Future Seal Coating	The first application of sealcoat material 5 years after installation of new public roads.	Pays the material and installation costs for the first application of sealcoat material. Completed with the annual street maintenance program 5 years after initial paving.	Estimated costs based upon the previous year's street maintenance program.
Street Lights	Direct payment to Connexus Energy to install subdivision streetlighting in new developments.	By subdivision ordinance streetlights are required in the urban/MUSA areas.	Based upon quotes from Connexus Energy to perform the work, and included in the development agreement as a stage 2 improvement. Developer pays the initial capital cost to install the lights & the first 3 years energy & maintenance (E&M), the City then passes on the E&M costs to the residents within that subdivision as a separate quarterly charge (in addition to priority streetlights).

reach $10,000 or more. Therefore, Staff determined that a flat fee would be more feasible and simpler approach.

Trees	Depends on whether commercial or residential. For single family residential projects, there is a landscaping escrow that is only collected if landscaping is not complete by the time the Certificate of Occupancy is requested. The landscaping escrow, which covers sod, trees, and topsoil, is $5,000.00. For commercial projects, trees are part of the required improvements and thus the fee ($300 per tree which accounts for tree, delivery, installation) is collected as part of the Stage I surety.	The purpose of the escrow is to ensure that the required landscaping (per City Code) is installed within six (6) months of issuance of the Certificate of Occupancy. If not, the City can draw upon the escrow to complete the work. Installation of trees is required by City Code and the surety is collected to ensure that this work is completed per the approved plans.	Staff initially tried to calculate these costs on a lot by lot basis, but it was not uncommon for those calculations to reach $10,000 or more. Therefore, Staff determined that a flat fee would be more feasible and simpler approach. Staff looks at the cost for the trees themselves but also the delivery and installation costs when determining the per tree fee.

Shrubs	Generally speaking, shrubs are not specifically required for single family home projects but are often part of multi-family projects. For commercial and multi-family projects, shrubs are part of the required improvements and thus the fee ($75 per shrub, which accounts for shrub, delivery, installation) is collected as part of the Stage I surety.	Installation of shrubs is required by City Code and the surety is collected to ensure that this work is completed per the approved plans.	Staff looks at the cost for the shrubs themselves but also the delivery and installation costs when determining the per shrub fee.

Fee/Charge	Description (what is the fee)	Rationalization (the purpose)	Methodology (studies/forecasts to determine what we need to charge)
Erosion Control	Erosion controls are part of stormwater runoff management programs. The controls often involve the creation of a physical barrier to prevent erosion caused by water. The City of Ramsey charges a $100 administrative fee and also requires a $1,500 escrow.	The purpose of the administrative fee is to cover administrative costs in the finance department. The purpose of the escrow is to give builders and incentive to abide erosion control standards. If the property owner doesn't comply the city can use the escrow to complete the work.	There are laws that the City of Ramsey is responsible to abide by in regards to surface water discharge (and thus erosion control) under the National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System (NPDES) enforced by the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency (MPCA). The City of Ramsey is issued a Municipal Separate Storm Sewer System (MS4) permit from the MPCA to discharge storm water into our rivers and lakes. In order to comply with standards set by these agencies (and adopted by Council), the City of Ramsey must prevent run off from construction sites (i.e. a new single family home) by means of erosion control practices.

Radon Barrier	Barrier to prevent radon gas from seeping through a basement floor.	Required by the State of Minnesota—prevention of radon poisoning.	Required by the State of Minnesota
Foundation Drainage	Instillation of drain tile in the base of a foundation.	Required by the State of Minnesota—prevention of water damage.	MN Rules, Section R405 Foundation Drainage
Certificate of Occupancy	Is a Certificate stating that materials and products meet specified standards or that work was done in compliance with approved construction documents. A certificate of occupancy is issued on a sheet of paper. The charge for the occupancy certificate is $4.00 per unit.	After the building official inspects a building or structure and finds no violations of the code or other laws that are enforced, the building official shall issue a certificate of occupancy.	MN Rules, Chapter 1300.0220
Builder License	This is a license issued through the Department of Labor and Industry (DOLI). I am unaware of the charge for the builder license.	This license asserts that the contractor has met the educational requirements, paid the required license fee and provided sufficient insurance necessary to be a State of MN Residential Building Contractor.	The City of Ramsey has adopted the MN State Building code; The Department of Labor and Industry (DOLI) requires all building contractors and residential remodelers who contract with an owner to construct or improve dwellings for habitation by one to four families (including detached garages) and perform two or more special skills to be licensed.

Fee/Charge	Description (what is the fee)	Rationalization (the purpose)	Methodology (studies/forecasts to determine what we need to charge)
Base Building Permit Fee	Each municipality must determine its own permit fee schedule. The State Building Code does not establish fee schedules. The applicant for a permit for a building; structure; or electrical; gas; mechanical, or plumbing system or alterations requiring a permit shall pay the fee set by the municipality.	Fees established by the municipality must be by ordinance and must be fair, reasonable, and proportionate to the actual cost of the service for which the fee is imposed. Permit fees pay for, inspections; building division operating expenses; staff wages; vehicles; vehicle insurance.	MN Rules, Chapter 1300.0160 Fees City Code Sec. 105-24. Permits, inspections and fees.
Internal Plan Review Fee	Plan review is characterized by the building official's ability to address code issues ahead of time, thereby providing a cost savings to the owner through a more effective construction schedule and the cost savings	Fees established by the municipality must be by ordinance and must be fair, reasonable, and proportionate to the actual cost of the service for which the fee is imposed. Plan review fees pay for the plan review. Plan review is conducted by Building Division staff;	MN Rules, Chapter 1300.0160 Fees City Code Sec. 105-24. Permits, inspections and fees that might otherwise be used by making on-site corrections. Plan review can also serve to promote a positive and more open form of communication between the building official and their clients. Plan review is charged at 65% of the “base permit fee”, and for similar construction after the initial plan review it is charge at 25% for new residential construction. MN Rules 1300.0160 Subp. 6	Planning staff and Engineering staff.

City Sewer Connection	This is a connection made outside of the house to the city sewer line at the curb. The fee for the connection and subsequent inspection is $75.00 plus a state surcharge.	The purpose is to insure that the connection made conforms to the intent of the plumbing code.	City Code Sec. 58-139 Sewer System
City Water Connection	This is a connection made outside of the house to the city water line at the curb. The fee for the connection and subsequent inspection is $75.00 plus a state surcharge.	The purpose is to insure that the required connection has been made; there is no abuse of the cities water supply and no potential for cross contamination.	City Code Sec. 58-113 Water Connections
Water Availability Charge	Also known as a WAC, the current WAC charge is $1,701.00. We collect the fee any time a new residential house, townhouse or apartment unit connecting to city services is issued a permit, and anytime either a new commercial building or addition to an existing commercial building which is connected to city services.	The charge is intended to ensure that individual lots or tracts of land connecting to city services have been charged/assessed its proportionate share of the cost of construction of the facilities to which such connection is made.	City Code Sec. 58-111 Utilities

Fee/Charge	Description (what is the fee)	Rationalization (the purpose)	Methodology (studies/forecasts to determine what we need to charge)
Sewer Availability Charge	Also known as a SAC, the current (2011) SAC charge is $2,230.00. We are required to collect this fee on behalf of the Metropolitan Council; they determine the fee from year to year. The fee is collected through building permits for new residential construction, multifamily construction, apartment buildings(by unit), new commercial buildings that connect to city services and any additions and some change in occupancy to commercial buildings that are connected to city services. We then convey the fee(s) collected to the Met. Council on a monthly basis.	A metropolitan SAC is paid by the municipality to the Council (MCES) as users connect to the metropolitan wastewater system for the first time or as a user’s maximum demand for sewer capacity increases. Note that these fees are for the availability of capacity (not the actual use) as demanded by development or changes in use on specific properties in the community.	The SAC system was implemented metro-wide in 1973. The metropolitan SAC funds collected pay for the reserve capacity (unused) portion of the capital costs of the metropolitan wastewater system as authorized in Minn. Statutes sections 473.517 (3).

SAC handling Fee	The SAC handling fee is the additional administration fee collected at time when SAC charges are paid on building permit The SAC handling fee is currently $200 per address (not per unit: Example Townhomes Unit #a-f would be charged $200)	Purpose is to cover the administrative costs in recording the SAC units in building permit system (audited by MET Council) Reconciling SAC units collected (finance general ledger system with buildings PIMS system) and Filing Report & cutting check to MET council for SAC collected with building permit	As the SAC collection passes through two departments & three to four individuals to record payment, reconcile account and process payment to Met Council this was to cover the salary of staff time. For 2012, this fee will be amended to $25.00 per address.
Water Meter/Horn	The city shall exclusively own, control and supply the water meters to be used in the municipal water system. The city shall install all water meters. An appropriate charge, reflective of the size of meter, will be required for the use of the meter. This charge shall be established by council resolution.	No person shall be allowed municipal water until the city determines that the meter supplied has been placed in such a manner that it will register all water consumed, and that all other parts of the plumbing and pipe fitting in and about the premises has been in full compliance with the rules and regulations which the city shall make from time to time.	City Code Sec. 58-112. Water meters.
Mechanical Permit	Each municipality must determine its own permit fee schedule. The State Building Code does not establish fee schedules. The applicant for a permit for a building; structure; or electrical; gas; mechanical, or plumbing system or alterations requiring a permit shall pay the fee set by the municipality.	Fees established by the municipality must be by ordinance and must be fair, reasonable, and proportionate to the actual cost of the service for which the fee is imposed. Title:

2011 Development Costs Study

Background:

As part of the Ramsey City Council's 2011 strategic goals, "Reviewing development fees and standards regarding construction" was identified as a council priority.

This study, the "2011 Development Costs Study," aims to understand how different cities assess the costs of new development.

In late April, the City of Ramsey sent a "Development Costs Survey" to 10 municipalities. The survey consisted of 200 questions. Completed surveys were received in mid June.

The purpose of this case is to review The 2011 Development Costs Study results.

Observations:

Each and every city in this survey assesses development costs differently. Some municipalities rely more on developers to install needed infrastructure and to make site improvements than other municipalities. Some municipalities install needed infrastructure and make site improvements independently and then charge developers. Some cities put most of their costs into one part of a building permit and others break down their costs into separate permit fees. Some cities account for nearly all costs through development fees and some cities absorb costs into the general operating budget. Some cities pass on costs to end users rather than developers (i.e. residents and businesses) through utilities and assessments. Furthermore, there is often times a difference in development fee rates for fully developed communities when compare to developing communities.

Cities also assign expenses in several different ways: flat rates, area specific rates, escrows, per unit rates, per acre rates, type of land use rates, per hour rates, assessments, trunk fees, etc.

The 2011 Development Costs Study results are broken down in two documents (both are attachments in this case). First, being the executive report; and second being the appendix.

The attached executive report contains background information on the development study and an overview of the results.

The attached appendix contains detailed background information on how the study was conducted, how the survey was broken down and it also includes individual answers for each individual question asked in the survey.

When reviewing the results of this survey please consider the following:

- When cities rely on the developer to install (DI) needed public infrastructure; or, when a city assesses (ASSD) the cost of public infrastructure to future property owners those costs are not reflected in this survey. The actual cost of development (for a developer) would be greater than stated.

Take scenario #1 for example, the City of Blaine has a much lower total cost of development than the City of Ramsey. However, the City of Blaine lists DI (developer installed) as an answer to five separate questions. Those developer installed costs are likely to exceed $300,000.

- Leaving an answer space blank, writing "zero," writing the word "nothing," writing an answer that doesn't apply and not having a fee/cost are all considered the same answer (zero/NA).

- People interpret identical questions differently; and, people answer identical questions differently (i.e. including a partial answer or common answer rather than a factual answer).
- Categories of costs were left out: fire suppression costs, irrigation requirements and several other development costs were not included in the survey.

To summarize where the City of Ramsey stacks up, in terms of the cost of development, there are four major findings:

- (1) Generally, total development costs are marginally higher in Ramsey than other communities surveyed; although certainly not the highest. NOTE: As stated, the survey does not capture the value of developer installed and assessed fees/charges. Most cities surveyed have a higher cost of development than shown.
- (2) Generally, utility rates in the City of Ramsey are lower than other communities surveyed
- (3) Generally, the City of Ramsey's building permit fees are similar to other communities surveyed
- (4) Generally, other cities rely on the developer to install needed infrastructure more often than the City of Ramsey does.

Staff would like to note a few of points:

- Ramsey is considering an update to its comprehensive sewer and water plan on or before 2014; which, may result in adjustments to development and utility fees.
- Budgeting for a future $20 million dollar water treatment facility affects multiple development fees.
- Parks and Trails fees are based on both current needs and future expectations.

Staff will continue to identify fees for further review and provide some very basic, broad recommendations at the meeting on Tuesday.

Recommendation:

- (1) City staff would like to identify a list of existing development fees/charges that could be considered for either reduction or elimination to be brought back to the City Council.
- (2) City staff would like to develop a set development fee options to help evaluate how lowering one fee may affect other fees. NOTE: There is balancing act between utility fees and development fees. Lowering one typically results in raising the other. In 2004, the policy directive from the City Council was to pass the development costs onto the developer, thereby keeping the quarterly utility rates low.
- (3) City staff would like to further develop a breakdown of development and building fees into a concise document that is included with any land use application packet. Specifically, staff would like to define, evaluate and explain the purpose of each fee. Having such a list will not only help in future development costs discussions, it will help developers that have questions about development fees/charges.

CALL TO ORDER

Mayor Ramsey called the City Council Work Session to order at 5:33 p.m.

APPROVE AGENDA

The agenda was approved as submitted.

COUNCIL TOPICS FOR DISCUSSION

1) 2011 Development Costs Study

Planning Intern Patrick Brama presented the staff report. He noted it was difficult to compile this information from other cities. He said it was not a comprehensive study, but to the extent that the information was obtainable, it is as complete as possible. He acknowledged it was a challenge to compare apples-to-apples and explained the portions of the survey and how the pieces worked together.

Councilmember Wise stated he has had many discussions with developers over the years, and the perception is that Ramsey's rates are high.

Public Works Director Olson confirmed Mr. Brama did an excellent job on this survey and it will be very helpful for planning and developing competitive rates.

Councilmember McGlone stated he has spoken with developers who say the developer fees are key to where they will build. He suggested instituting a usage fee instead of a developer fee.

Councilmember Backous inquired why the League of Minnesota Cities (LMNC) hasn't drawn a comparison chart together throughout the State to get accurate information. He stated this document is good, though there was varying levels of cooperation. He suggested there might be more willing participants if the study was done by the LMNC.

Councilmember Strommen agreed the information from city to city would not be comparable with only a small number of cities participating. She also noted developers choose where they will develop based on the flexibility of the process.

Mr. Brama explained the cities were selected geographically. He tried to contact a few outlying cities, though Prior Lake was the only city that responded.

Mayor Ramsey commented if the perception is that Ramsey is too expensive for developing, that perception needs to be changed.

Public Works Director Olson appreciated the comments and concerns. He raised the issue of utility rates. He noted the two options to bring them inline are to scale back improvements or shift more fees onto the residents.

Councilmember Wise stated it is not the hard costs of the fees that are an issue; it is the process. He noted when an applicant has to appear before the Council to make a minor change that requires new drawings; it costs the applicant money for that process.

Senior Planner Gladhill responded the Planning and Zoning Department is trying its best to improve that process. He invited the Councilmembers to bring forth ideas.

Consensus was reached to schedule a larger group discussion with various participants regarding fees in the near future.

Councilmember Tossey brought up a concern about fees for inspection for soil and erosion. He said he wanted to be sure the fee was justified and if there is a state law, Ramsey needs to follow it.

2) Delegate Management of City Hall Lobby Area to the Ramsey Foundation

Deputy City Administrator Nelson reviewed the staff report.

Mayor Ramsey explained the function of The Foundation. He suggested some of the committees may like to have displays in the lobby from time to time, but someone must manage the displays and calendar. He suggested other uses for the area, including putting a numbering machine from the license bureau there for people to wait their turn in the lobby. Another use could be putting a monitor out there and information on community groups, so people could flip through while waiting their turn.

Councilmember McGlone stated there are certain groups that the City could not allow to use the space, and this should be discussed in more detail.

Mayor Ramsey noted a policy could be drawn to determine what could be displayed in the lobby.

Direction was given to staff to draw a policy related to what could be displayed in the lobby, and the Council will review it.

3) Approve Contract Maintenance Services for The Draw

Parks Supervisor Riverblood reviewed the staff report. He noted after reviewing the costs for staff to handle the maintenance, the total came to $13,211.70. The low bidder for contract maintenance services as $14,080. He noted staff is recommending going forward with the contract for various reasons. The cost of training staff, plus the costs of purchasing and maintaining equipment takes staff away from the current duties they are keeping up. One full time employee resigned and it is not feasible to replace that position in this environment.

Councilmember McGlone noted if the staff handles the maintenance, a building would be needed as well as insurance and the ability to handle repairs.

Councilmember Strommen suggested trying the contracted maintenance for a year and evaluate then. She noted there are hidden costs in hiring contractors as well.

Consensus was reached to approve staff to enter into an agreement for Contracted Maintenance for The Draw, with Prescription Landscape.

FUTURE TOPICS FOR DISCUSSION

1) Review Future Topics/Calendar

Deputy City Administrator Nelson reviewed upcoming topics and events.

Development Costs Study Follow Up

Background:

As part of the Ramsey City Council's 2011 strategic goals, "Reviewing development fees and standards regarding construction" was identified as a council priority.

In late April 2011, the City of Ramsey initiated a "Development Costs Study" with 10 municipalities. Results of the development costs study were presented to the Ramsey City Council on August 23, 2011.

From the August 23 meeting, staff received direction to further investigate multiple items regarding both the development costs study and development fees charged by the City of Ramsey.

The purpose of this case is to respond to those inquiries made by the City Council in the August 23 meeting.

Observations:

The following six items are the council inquiries from the August 23 meeting. The attached document (Council Inquiries) contains responses from city staff to the said inquiries. Note: a number of the staff responses to the council inquiries required individual attachments; which, are noted within the "Council Inquiries" document.

1. Contact the LMC and Metro Cities, do they do a study?
2. Comprehensive Sewer and Water Study, what are the costs / timeliness / benefits?
3. Follow up on erosion control: what are the laws and regulations?
4. Development Fee Chart: City staff would like to further develop a breakdown of development and building fees into a concise document
5. City staff would like to identify a list of existing development fees / charges that could be considered for either reduction or elimination
6. Developer Open House / Survey / Focus Group

Council Action:

- (1) Consider adopting the proposed changes in development fees/charges
 - (2) Direct staff to request bids for both a comprehensive sewer and water system study

Council Inquiries: August 23, 2011 City Council Work Session

Please see the following pages for responses to each inquiry.

1. Contact the LMC and Metro Cities, do they do a study?
2. Comprehensive Sewer and Water Study, what are the costs/timelines/benefits?
3. Follow up on erosion control what are the laws and regulations?
4. Development Fee Chart: City staff would like to further develop a breakdown of development and building fees into a concise document.
5. City staff would like to identify a list of existing development fees/charges that could be considered for either reduction or elimination to be brought back to the Council.
6. Developer Open House/Survey/Focus Group/Pizza

1. Contact the LMC and Metro Cities, do they do a study?

The LMC does not do such a study beyond their normal activities. They would be willing to take the request to their board.

Metro Cities does do a survey that is bi annual. It is known as a "Rates and Fees" survey. They did complete a survey this spring. You need to be a member of the association to be involved with the survey ($7,500). The City of Ramsey is not part of Metro Cities. Attached to this case are the results of the 2011 study, please see "Metro Cities Survey Results."

NOTE: the Metro Cities survey is heavily focused on administrative fees. The development costs questions are not based on development scenarios like the Ramsey survey. Therefore, the Metro Cities questions are not answered in an apples-to-apples basis. Finally, the Ramsey survey covered many development costs that were not covered in the Metro Cities survey.

2. Comprehensive Sewer and Water Study, what are the costs/timelines/benefits?

The purpose of a comprehensive sewer and water plan is to provide the city with necessary information regarding the city's sewer/water systems, water supply, water storage and sewer/water transportation. We can use this information to establish priorities, plan, fund and implement future sewer/water system improvements. Specifically regarding the development costs study, this information will help the city make policy decisions as we continue reviewing the development process.

One important note to make, in regards to the 2004 comprehensive sewer/water studies, is that the population (i.e. demand) projections are off from reality. The 2004 plan projected a total city population of nearly 35,000 in 2010. Therefore, many of the recommendations from the 2004 study need to be adjusted.

The last time the City of Ramsey completed a comprehensive sewer/water study it took about three months. The cost is about $25,000-$35,000 per utility (one for water and one for sewer).

3. Follow up on erosion control what are the laws and regulations?

Concerns: (A) Are we sure that the $100 administrative fee and the $1,500 erosion control escrow are justified? (B) Is there a state law?

- A. The $100 administrative fee covers the cost of finance department to administer the erosion control escrow.

The $1,500 escrow is used as leverage by the City of Ramsey to encourage builders/property owners to abide by erosion control standards. Without the escrow, the city reserves no means to enforce compliance to erosion control standards. These funds are only used to correct a deficiency if the builder/property owner refuses to take action on their own following notification.

- B. There are laws that the City of Ramsey is responsible to abide by (unfunded mandates) in regards to surface water discharge (and thus erosion control) under the National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System (NPDES) enforced by the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency (MPCA) and Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

The City of Ramsey is issued a Municipal Separate Storm Sewer System (MS4) permit from these agencies to discharge storm water into our rivers and lakes. In order to comply with standards set by these agencies (and adopted by Council), the City of Ramsey must prevent run off from construction sites (i.e. a new single family home) by means of erosion control practices.

The City of Ramsey is liable for non-compliance with these regulations as the local enforcement agency. Therefore, not enforcing these regulations may result in the City of Ramsey losing their MS4 permit and possibly incurring fines/ charges/ administrative penalties. The MPCA does not charge anything for the City's MS4 permit, however, it is anticipated that this will change in the near future with an estimated fee of approximately $1,000.

Finally, there is also a $400 fee for a NPDES permit on every individual project that disturbs more than one acre (road construction, development, etc.), which goes directly to the state.

Staff input: Staff believes that $100 administrative fee could be absorbed in the overall building permit fee (base building permit fee). Doing so could result in use of general funds, should the expenditures exceed what is collected (plan review, inspections, enforcement, overhead, etc.).

Staff believes that it is important to keep an erosion escrow (and the encompassing ordinance), as it makes it the responsibility of the individual performing the work to handle their own erosion control requirements instead of making the responsibility of all that live within the City.

4. Development Fee Chart: City staff would like to further develop a breakdown of development and building fees into a concise document.

Attached to this case is chart that breaks down every development fee in the City of Ramsey. The chart includes a description, rationalization and methodology for determining each fee.

5. City staff would like to identify a list of existing development fees/charges that could be considered for either reduction or elimination to be brought back to the Council.

Attached to this case is list of development fees/charges that staff has identified for reduction or elimination.

Also attached to this case is an example of what the proposed changes would look like. The included example references the 120 unit single family home development used in the development costs study (i.e. scenario 1)

6. Developer Open House/Survey/Focus Group/Pizza

Proposed date: Tuesday December 6, 11:00am to 1:00pm—Lake Itasca Room.

Fees/Charges to consider for reduction/elimination

Important Note: These fees are based on a 120 unit residential development: Scenario #1

FEE/CHARGE	Description/Notes/Suggestions	Estimated Costs for Scenario 1 (120 Residential Development)
$100 Admin Fee	Used for erosion control and landscape escrows. Staff is proposing the elimination of the $100 administrative fee for both erosion and landscape escrows. Based on scenario #1, that is $1,200 per fee. Staff Note: $8,000 has been budgeted from the general fund to cover these costs in 2012 (this includes certificate of occupancy--below).	$1,200 reduction, erosion control $1,200 reduction, landscape
Certificate of Occupancy	Staff believes that the CO fee could be reduced or eliminated. Staff believes that the city incurs little cost to issue a CO. This is a $4 per unit charge. Based on scenario #1, that is a $480 fee. Staff Note: $8,000 has been budgeted from the general fund to cover these costs in 2012 (this includes the two $100 admin fees--above).	$480 reduction, certificate of occupancy
Future Seal Coating	This fee is being eliminated. In 2014 there will be no assessment for this work via city council direction.	$21,750 reduction, future seal coating
FEE/CHARGE	Description/Notes/Suggestions	Estimated Costs for Scenario 1 (120 Residential Development)

		Development)
Street lights	Currently, the city charges two fees for street lights. (1) a fee for the physical light/installation (2) a fee for three years energy and maintenance. Staff believes that the first fee (1) could be eliminated --$1,700 per light. The developer can work directly with energy company to install street lights (i.e. this fee becomes developer installed). Staff believes that the city should still charge the second fee (2): for three years energy and maintenance--$294 per light. The street light fee would change from $1,994 per light to $294 per light. Based on scenario #1, the total street lights fee would drop from $63,808 to $9,408. Staff Note: Developer must install standard light. City will own and maintain in the future. The city will ensure developer completes the work by including in development escrow. The escrow would be $54,400.	$54,400 reduction (1,700*32 lights)
Traffic Signs	Staff suggested the elimination of traffic signs fees; this would become a developer installed improvement. Based on development scenario #1, the city would charge $225 per sign ($3,375 for the entire development). Staff Note: Ensure developer completes the work by including in development escrow. The escrow would be $3,375.	$3,375 reduction, traffic signs
