

TRAPS PROMOTES COMMUNITY HEALTH AND INNOVATIVE PARTNERSHIPS FOR PLAY

Statewide Training and Funding Initiative

ABOUT THE INITIATIVE

TRAPS, GameTime, and PlayCore are aligning resources and strategically partnering to promote community health and wellness throughout the state of Texas. Through this initiative, we invite park & recreation professionals, education professionals, planning and design professionals, and community partners to join and learn about current trends and research-based best practices for play and recreation destinations.

The goals of the initiative are:

Educate: Offer statewide training opportunities on research-based practices for creating high quality play and recreation destinations.

Advocate: Demonstrate how TRAPS and parks and recreation are essential contributors to improving the quality of life of children, families, and communities across the state of Texas.

Collaborate: Facilitate strategic partnerships and identify funding opportunities to promote community health and wellness. Discuss how innovative partnerships, including schools, park and recreation, and community advocates, can work together to build stronger communities through the power of play and recreation.

Fund: Provide funding opportunities to support the deployment of National Demonstration Sites across Texas to create projects of excellence that support physical activity, inclusion, and engagement with nature.

Research: Capture community vitality outcomes, compiled in site-specific data reports, to help showcase user and community benefits as related to project goals and future priorities.

Celebrate: Distribute ongoing communications, provide opportunities to share community impact, and engage with PlayCore's scholar network. Your leadership will be recognized for championing high quality play and recreation initiatives across Texas.
